The local official forecast for to-day is rain, cooler. For Tuesday, cooler, cloudy, with a cold wave Wednesday. Observer Hagen says: "The storm center is just north of us this morning, disappearing northward. Its influence has been felt as far south as Louisiana and has created gales of 40 miles along the lakes. The storm signal was displayed along the lakes last night.

The wind will probably continue from the southwest to-day and veer to the west to-morrow. It is hardly probable that we will have clear sky until Wednesday, and the cold wave which is coming may continue the cloudiness still longer. The highest temperature on the government weather map to-day is 74 degrees at Galveston; the lowest, 10 degrees below zero, at Assiniboine, Mon.

The highest temperature in Toledo yesterday was 58 degrees; the lowest this morning 46 degrees. Total rainfall .08 inches."

Forecast for western New York and Ohio—Threatening weather and rain; southerly winds to-day, shifting to decided colder northwesterly winds during the night; cold wave Tuesday, with local snows.

For Indiana and Illinois—Decidedly colder; northwesterly winds and frequent snows, with a cold wave; decidedly colder Tuesday, with local snows.

For Michigan and Wisconsin—Decidedly colder; brisk and high northwesterly winds, with a cold wave; threatening weather and frequent snows; decidedly colder, with occasional snows Tuesday.

STORMS AND WARS

Keep the People of Brazil in Excitement.

Regardless of the Peace Bulletins Sent Out,

There is Every Reason to Believe to the Contrary.

Fonseca's Navy is Divided Against Itself.

The Dictator Has Twenty Thousand Men Concentrated at Rio—A Tornado Has Swept Over Sante Fe, Killing and Wounding Many People.

New York, Nov. 16.—The Herald's Valparaiso dispatches this morning say that the Chilian minister at Buenos Ayres wires his government that the provisional junta recently organized in the state of Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, is composed of Visconde de Polatas, Itaqui, Ossorio, Silveira Martins and Dr. Assiz, Brazil.

The latter named personage is president of the junta. The junta has issued a proclamation of protest against the acts of Fonseca, and has made a general demand upon all the cities of Rio Grande do Sul to appoint revolutionary committees whose duties it will be to enlist men and secure arms for the revolutionists.

The junta declares in favor of an impartial government as substitute for the dictatorship, and it is to proceed to the election of a new president in place of Fonseca.

Latest advices from Rio Janeiro say that Fonseca is augmenting his forces and the city is in a state of great excitement. Fonseca is reported to have 20,000 men concentrated at Rio. It is the general belief in Buenos Ayres that Fonseca will be successful in suppressing his enemies.

A report reached Valparaiso last night that the Brazilian navy is divided in its sympathies.

Grows More Alarming.

A special cable dispatch to the Herald from Buenos Ayres says the news from Brazil is of a still more alarming character. It indicates a rapid spread of the revolution all through Rio Grande do Sul.

Gov. Castilho resigned on Saturday, leaving the state government in the hands of the junta. From all accounts the revolutionists, so far, have been entirely successful. The garrison at Itagui on the Uruguay river, surrendered without a battle. Porto Alegro, the capital of the state, is in the hands of the revolutionists. It is believed that several Brazilian provinces will join the movement against the dictator.

Disastrous Storms.

Another cable dispatch to the Herald from Buenos Ayres says a terrible tornado passed over the province of Sante Fe, 30 miles miles from Rosario, Friday night, causing great destruction to property and loss of life. The town of Arroyo Seco was entirely destroyed.

The number of deaths is reported to be forty and of wounded thirty.

A train of eighteen coaches was at the station when the tornado swept through the town. It was overturned and many of the passengers were buried in the wreck. The details of the disaster are meager on account of the damage to the telegraph lines.

THE BARNABY CASE.

It Takes Another Sensational Turn.

Son-in-Law Conrad Sued for $100,000 for Libel by the Counsel for Defense.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 16.—An entirely new sensation in the Barnaby poisoning case was developed in the arrest of John H. Conrad, the son-in-law of Mrs. Josephine Barnaby, on complaint of Col. Daniel R. Ballou. The charge is libel, and the damages are laid at $100,000.

The suit is based upon an article published here—an interview with Mr. Conrad in an evening paper relative to the connection Daniel R. Ballou had, as the attorney of Mrs. Barnaby and Dr. T. Thatcher Graves, in the settlement of the contest over the will of the late J. B. Barnaby.

There is a great deal back of this interview which it would be impolitic to disclose now. Suffice it to say that Mr. Conrad has alleged that of $15,000, the first money paid to Mrs. Barnaby's trustee after the will case was settled, $10,600 was paid to Ballou & Jackson, of which large sum but $600 figured as actual court expenses.

Mr. Conrad called on Mr. Ballou and demanded certain papers which he claimed ought to be delivered to him as the legal representative of Mrs. Barnaby, and which were denied him. They are of vital importance to the case to be tried in Denver, and Mr. Conrad asserted that they were kept back for Dr. Graves' use. He criticised Mr. Ballou in very harsh terms, but only in reply to a very harsh statement which Mr. Ballou is credited in making in public print concerning the people of Denver and the plains.

Mr. Conrad at once gave bail in $100,000, Postmaster C. H. George being his bondsman. He laughs at Ballou's suit, and welcomes the prosecution and the inquiry which it will call for into the management of Mrs. Barnaby's estate.

JOHN JACOB ASTOR.

A Son is Born in the Millionaire Family.

He Will Have At His Command $150,000,000 and Can Take It Comparatively Easy.

New York, Nov. 16.—A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor yesterday. It was decided some time ago that if the expected child was a boy it should bear the now famous name of John Jacob Astor. The infant belongs to the fifth generation which has borne that name in America, and will inherit $150,000,000.

METHODIST APPROPRIATIONS.

The Church North and South is still a Source of Trouble.

Cleveland, Nov. 16.—The Methodist General Missionary Committee have struck the old snag of the relationship between the Church and North and South.

Opposition to appropriations for Southern territory appeared in several quarters, and Bishop Foster made an impassioned speech in which he said that he had seen effects of Northern interference with the field occupied by the Southern Church which were so terrible that he would not describe them. The matter is as yet undecided, though $3,500 was voted to the Alabama Missions.

GREEN GOODS SWINDLE.

New York, Nov. 16.—Nathan Boyett, a well-to-do farmer and president of the local bank at Boyett, N. C., was swindled out of $300 by green-goods men. He received the usual circular at his home a month ago and early came to New York to "get rich." He was fleeced out of his money in the usual method adopted by the green goods men and left for home.

OLD ENOUGH TO KNOW BETTER.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 16.—Mrs. Ada Meinot took her 17-year-old son to a museum where one of the attractions is a William Tell act. Yesterday she playfully put a potato on her head, remarking to the boy that he could not shoot it off. The boy had a revolver and aiming it pulled the trigger. The bullet lodged in the woman's neck and she will die.

BIG PENSIONS GRANTED.

Columbus, O., Nov. 16.—The United States pension agency received notice from the Washington department to pay the following pensions: Margaret Foster, of Kenton, $2,284.80; Sophia Pohlman, of College Hill, Hamilton county, $2,073.73; Lizzie A. Rapp, of Zanesville, $2,894.43; Converse E. Leland, of Defiance, $3,148.70.

COUNTERFEIT "V."

Lancaster, Pa., Nov. 16.—Business men of this city and vicinity have been victimized for the past few days by a counterfeit $5 treasury note. In the title "United States the "I" is not dotted, although the heavy shading is there.

MINISTER MONTT.

Washington, Nov. 16.—Senor Don Pedro Montt, the Chilian minister, was presented to the president by Secretary Blaine this morning, and formally recognized as the accredited representative of Chili.

CASE OF DR. M'GLYNN.

An Ultimatum Delivered by the Powers.

Archbishop Corrigan Quotes An Interesting Letter From the Sacred Congregation on the Subject.

New York, Nov. 16.—Archbishop Corrigan was seen by a reporter regarding the rumor to the effect that the Rev. Edward McGlynn was about to be reinstated in the priesthood of the Roman Catholic church. The archbishop made the following statement:

"The position of the church with regard to Dr. McGlynn has been misunderstood, and I wish to set the matter right, so that there may be no misapprehension or false conception of the attitude of the holy see. In regard to the case of Dr. McGlynn, it will suffice to quote a letter sent to me some time ago by the Sacred Congregation with permission to publish it whenever such a step should seem advisable. This letter has been approved word for word by the holy father, and the public may rest assured that no departure will be made from its provisions. Referring to the efforts made by a friendly prelate in behalf of Dr. McGlynn, the Sacred Congregation says:

"'They make him reflect that the propaganda came to the decision reached by them with regard to Dr. McGlynn on the strength of incontestible documents, after long and patient waiting and after having employed in the case every means that the wisdom and patience of the holy see could suggest. With this view, a brief history was given of the action of the Sacred Congregation in the premises from which it is made manifest that the propaganda punished Dr. McGlynn for disobedience of the orders of the holy father without entering into the merits of the case. Finally, they concluded to still be disposed to mercy should he recur to the indulgence of the holy see. In this case the request would not be considered as an appeal, but a petition for the review of his case to be granted only by submitting to the following conditions: 1. That Dr. McGlynn himself makes the request and state his grievance. 2. That he publicly condemn all that he has said and done of an insulting character as against the archbishop and as against the holy see. 3. That he be ready to abide by orders and submit to the judgment of the apostolic see. 4. That he promise to abstain from any public utterance or assistance at any meeting on the matter under consideration.'

"This," said the archbishop, "is the ultimatum. I would be happy to see Dr. McGlynn relieved from the penalities under which he is suffering, but I have no hope whatever that anything will be done for him until he submits to the authority of the holy see."

CHARLIE EVERS AN EDITOR.

He Has Purchased the Napoleon Democrat.

Napoleon, O., Nov. 16.—(Special)—The German Demokrat, a democratic newspaper owned by C. F. Clement, has passed into the hands of ex-Auditor Charles Evers.

The paper is about the largest German paper in this section of the state and wields a big influence in politics. The consideration was $5,500.

Mr. Evers is the right man in the right place, and he will without doubt keep the paper up to the excellent standard gained by Mr. Clement. The latter gentleman will remain in the office for several months as editor.

FOSTER IS FOR BRICE.

He Talks Plainly to the Hurrah Politicians.

The Republican Party Cannot Afford to Deliberately Steal the Seat of An Honored Ohio Democrat.

Washington, Nov. 16.—(Special)—Secretary Foster frowns upon the statements of the hurrah politicians of Ohio that an attempt should be made to unseat Senator Brice to make room for Foraker, and will oppose any such move with all his official force.

The secretary of the treasury thinks the republican party should get into office honorably or not at all, and does not want the charge of stealing a seat in the senate added to the many other crimes the party has committed against the people and for which it must answer.

PARNELL MEMORIAL.

New York, Nov. 16.—The Academy of Music was crowded last night to hear the Parnell memorial services. The chief speaker of the evening was Chauncey M. Depew, and his oration was enthusiastically received.

BANK FAILURE.

Tyler, Tex., Nov. 16.—The banking house of Bonner & Bonner has failed. The liabilities will exceed $500,000; assets about the same.

A REBELLION IN ALASKA.

The People Are Displeased With the Government,

And Protest Strongly Against the Officials.

They Claim They Are Plundered and Persecuted and Get No Just Returns From Uncle Sam.

Port Townsend, Wash., Nov. 16.—There's trouble brewing in Alaska, and any steamer may bring down intelligence of a small sized rebellion against some officials in Uncle Sam's northern territory.

The steamer Modico brings information that the people are complaining bitterly against the national government; that they have been ignored by each successive administration; that they have been taken from their homes and places of business, a distance of 180 miles, to Sitka, to do jury duty in obeyance of the summons from court; that money had been exacted by officials for imaginary licenses, yet the officials have gone unpunished; some remained in office after the fact had been made known to the national government; that people had been ejected from their homes into the streets, on the pretext that they were occupying government property, and also been forced into expensive litigation; that suits have been brought against them for trespass on the public domain, for cutting firewood for domestic and manufacturing purposes, and at the same time the government failed to provide means so that timber could legally be cut; that many other injustices have been heaped upon the heads of the people, and for 24 years they have humbly submitted, in the hope that the government would see the evil of its way.

The Juneau Mining Record suggests that the people of Alaska, irrespective of party or creed, assemble in convention and prepare a bill for a territorial form of government suitable to the needs and conditions of Alaska, submit the bill to the people of Alaska for their approval by ballot, then forward it to congress and ask its approval by that body.

If congress should refuse to pass such a bill, every resident of Alaska is advised to rise as one and unfurl the motto, "Alaska for Alaskans," elect their own judicial officers and resist all processes emanating from officials whose tenure of office is under organic act.

BULKELEY'S ACTS VALID.

Republicans in Connecticut Rejoicing.

The Supreme Court Holds That Possession is Nine Points of Law in This As Well As Many Other Cases.

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 16.—The republicans are elated over the decision of Judge Robinson, of the superior court, in the matter of the mandamus brought against State Comptroller Staub by Gov. Bulkeley's executive secretary, Mr. Brainard, to compel the payment of his salary.

The court holds that title to office cannot be tried in mandamus proceeding, and that Gov. Bulkeley, being in possession of the executive office, was de facto governor, and his acts were valid, including the appointment of an executive secretary.

The salary of Mr. Brainard being fixed by statute Comptroller Staub had no discretion but to pay it. A mandamus will be issued to compel the payment. Staub's counsel has appealed the case to the supreme court.

This was a test case, Staub having refused to pay the salaries of any of the holdover republican state officials.

Gov. Bulkeley has come to the relief of the farmers. The State Agricultural society was unable to pay the premiums awarded at the recent state fair because the society could not obtain the state appropriation.

Comptroller Staub refused payment because the money is not payable by statute but by special appropriation, and no such appropriation has been made, owing to the legislative deadlock. Gov. Bulkeley has notified the society that he will advance the money.

NOTHING IF NOT LOGICAL.

Foraker Should Not Kick At Federal Interference.

The Policy of the Republican Party Has Been One of Force When All Other Methods Fail.

Columbus, O., Nov. 16.—The friends of ex-Gov. Foraker in the senatorial fight claim an unfair advantage is being taken in the contest. The forces on either side have been traversing the state in pursuit of votes, and the information is given out from Foraker headquarters that Allen T. Brinsmade, United States district attorney, has several men in the field working in the interest of Senator Sherman and making promises of federal patronage to certain members-elect who are said to be for Foraker.

The Foraker people say that while they knew the administration would be against them they did not expect it would permit personal work among the members-elect, and they insist it is evidence of the critical position in which Sherman and his friends find themselves in the contest. Among those whom, it is stated, are traveling over the state in this capacity is ex-Senator J. K. Pollard, of Delaware, though they have a list of five or six who are engaged in this capacity.

The friends of Senator Sherman deny there is anything in this report, and say it is only a species of the tactics which the friends of the ex-governor propose to employ as a means of accounting for what is sure defeat when the time comes for the selection of a senator.

STAND BY SCHMIDT.

Berlin, Nov. 16.—The socialist members of the reichstag held a meeting yesterday to consider their course as to the case of Socialist Deputy Schmidt, held in imprisonment under sentence by the tribunal at Chemnitz. They unanimously decided to demand his release pending the session of the reichstag.

THE POPE IMPROVING.

Rome, Nov. 16.—The pope has fully recovered his health and, notwithstanding the cool weather, takes daily exercise in the vatican gardens, except when it storms, when he takes exercise in a hall specially fitted up for the purpose in the vatican.

BLAZE IN CLEVELAND.

One Life Lost and Damage Caused to the Extent of $200,000.

Cleveland, Nov. 16.—Fire started in the printing house of Short & Foreman last night and caused $200,000 damage before it was under control. Captain John Grady, of the fire department, was crushed to death.

The losses and insurance are as follows: Short & Foreman, on stock, $120,000, insurance nearly as much; O. C. Scoville, Short & Foreman building, $25,000, insured for $23,000; First National bank building, loss, $2,000. Cleveland Faucet company occupants, $50,000, insured; P. L. Johnson, building, loss, $500, insured. Bloch Billiard company occupants, loss $1,500, insured; P. L. Rimes, building, loss $200; G. B. Johnson, building, loss $200; J. M. Lenham, liquor store, loss $2,500; Thomas Hailey, saloon, loss $1,2000; Standard Bottling works, loss $3,000; H. C. Overhalt & Co., flavors, loss $1,200; American Brass company, loss $500; S. L. All the small losses are covered by insurance.

The wires of the Postal Telegraph company were burned off and the office closed for the night.

THE KAISER'S STAND.

Berlin, Nov. 16.—It is reported that the kaiser will be decidedly pacific in the tone of his speech to-morrow at the opening of the relchstag, while at the same time upholding the ability of Germany to defend the imperial interests.

COMMISSIONER MASON

Has Filed His Annual Report in Washington.

The Internal Revenue of the Country for a Year.

Amounts Paid By Distillers and Tobacco Merchants to the Government—Liquors to be Weighed Instead of Gauged.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The annual report of Mr. John W. Mason, commissioner of internal revenue, which has just been submitted to the secretary of the treasury, contains a mass of interesting information in regard to the operations of that service.

The total receipts for the last fiscal year from all sources were $146,035,416, an increase of $3,440,719 over the receipts for the previous fiscal year.

The cost of collection for the past fiscal year was $4,210,604, or 2.88 per cent of the receipts, against 2.82 last year. The estimated expenses for the next fiscal year are $4,522,380.

During the year 698 stills were destroyed and 97 were removed, involving the arrest of 378 persons.

The aggregate amount of taxes collected from tobacco during the last fiscal year was $32,796,270. The increase is $1,162,720, due to the reduction of the tax on snuff, chewing and smoking tobacco, and to the repeal of special taxes relating to tobacco.

The tax on cigars and cigarettes was not changed, and the collections therefrom were increased $1,386,650 during the last fiscal year.

The increase of taxed tobacco and snuff over 1890 was 15,650,884 pounds; the increase of tobacco and snuff exported was 4,289 pounds and the increase of tobacco and snuff imported and withdrawn for consumption was 165,701 pounds. The increase during the fiscal year of 1891 taxed cigars was 387,002,784, and the decrease of cigars exported was 40,966, and of cigars imported and withdrawn for consumption was 29,740,729.

The increase of taxed cigarettes was 451,284,080; and of cigarettes exported was 35,224,200. The decrease of cigarettes imported was 594,875.

The commissioner says that in order to make the tariff law effective several amendments will be required among which is one forfeiting illicit factories and also duly authorized factories where there is any serious violation of the law. It should also be made a penal offense to remove stamps, to re-use stamps, or to have in possession stamps that have once been used.

The total number of grain, molasses and fruit distilleries registered and operated during the year is 4,049 and 3,819 respectively, a decrease of 2,381 in the number registered and a decrease of 2,392 in the number operated.

The quantity of spirits (115,962,389 gallons) produced and deposited in distillery warehouses during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1891, is more than the production (109,275,928 gallons) of the year 1890 by 6,686,461 gallons. The difference is distributed among the different kinds, as known to the trade, as follows: Increase in production—High wines, 451,498 gallons; rye whisky, 989,812; alcohol, 906,373; rum, 126,504; gin, 90,934; pure, neutral, or cologne spirits, 1,333,507; miscellaneous, 5,331,202; total increase, 229,830 gallons; decrease in the production of Bourbon whisky, 2,543,369 gallons; net increase, 6,686,461 gallons.

There was an increase of spirits withdrawn for scientific purposes and for the use of the United States 958 gallons. The quantity of spirits in distillery warehouses June 30, 1891, is the largest quantity so held at the close of any fiscal year. This stock on hand has grown from 61,000,000 in 1888, to 68,000,000 in 1889, to 89,000,000 in 1890, and finally to the above quantity, nearly 113,000,000 in 1891.

It appears from reports recently received that while the quantity of spirits in distillery warehouses September 30, 1890, was 85,106,670 gallons, or more than 46,000,000 less than the quantity therein June 30, 1890, the quantity in warehouses September 30, 1891, was 104,810,892 gallons, or more than 81,000,000 less than the quantity so held June 30, 1891. It is noted also that this increased production is due to decrease in production during July, August and September, 1891, rather than to increased tax paid withdrawals, the quantity of withdrawn tax paid during these three months being nearly 1,000,000 gallons less than the quantity so withdrawn during July, August and September, 1890.

The quantity of distilled spirits in the United States, except what may be in customs bonded warehouses, on the 1st day of October, 1891, was 152,945,773 gallons, this quantity being distributed as follows: In distillery and special bonded warehouses, 106,539,408 gallons; in hands of retail dealers, 32,000,000; in hands of wholesale liquor dealers, 14,406,275; total, 152,945,773 gallons. In making the above computation the average stock of each retail liquor dealer in the United States is estimated at 130 gallons.

The actual number gallons of grape brandy used in the fortification of sweet wines during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1891, was 193,557, the tax upon which at 90c. per gallon, would have amounted to $174,201. It is probable that about double the above quantity of grape brandy will be used for the fortification of sweet wines during the current fiscal year. The commissioner announces his purpose of substituting weighing for gauging in ascertaining the quantity of distilled spirits subject to tax. He has, therefore, decided, with the approval of the secretary of the treasury, and under the authority of section 3249, revised statutes, to prescribe the use of the scales in place of the guage rods at distilleries and so far as applicable, at rectifying houses; retaining the rod for use in gauging packages of rectified spirits whose true proof is not ascertainable, owing to the presence of saccharine or other matter in the spirits; and other circumstances when the use of the scales may not be feasible.

BAD FOR THE CZAR.

Never in the History of the Russian Empire

Has the Situation Been So Dark for Alexander.

The Movement Favoring An Elective Parliament

Has Caused the Crowned Heads to Tremble.

The Half Has Not Been Told of the Suffering and Death That Prevails in the Interior of the Country—Strict Censorship on All Press Dispatches.

London, Nov. 16.—Since the arrest at Moscow, on Thursday last, of about 100 members of noble families, literaturs, and others, charged with being concerned in the movement looking to the creation of a popular assembly or parliament similar to the Temsky labor assembly under the early czars, it has become known that this alleged conspiracy was of much wider extent than at first supposed, and it is said that several hundred people have been taken into custody, in addition to those referred to.

From the time the discovery of this "plot" became known the correspondents in Russia of the news agencies and newspapers have been doing their utmost to discover the true inwardness of these wholesale arrests; but apparently, without success, for little or no news regarding this revolutionary movement can be procured.

A United Press correspondent at St. Petersburg wired last night as follows: "Strictest censorship on press dispatches observed. The government is contemplating severe measures against newspaper correspondents. It is almost impossible to get or send facts regarding the arrests of nobles and others who have been planning the creation of a parliament elected by the people. Extensive arrests have been made here as well as in Moscow and other cities. All information is refused. The police advise correspondents not to comment on the arrests. The situation is very grave and the wildest rumers are circulating."

In this city, however, there are a number of prominent Russian exiles who seem to be able to laugh at the Russian police and who are kept constantly well informed, by some secret means, as to nearly all that transpires in Russia.

One of the most prominent of these refugees was questioned last night in regard to the large number of arrests now being made in Russia. After the crorespondent had pledged himself not to use his informant's name, the latter said in substance that, never in the history of the Russian empire was the situtation of affairs within the dominions of the czar so desperate, and so weighted with danger to the imperial regime.

"Not a quarter of the real horrors of the famine are known," he added. "Thousands are dying in the famine stricken districts of starvation or typhoid fever, influenza or other diseases. In some sections," said the Russian gentleman referred to, "the distress is as great as when the cholera, or the plague, swept down upon villages and towns and took all their inhabitants off the face of the earth.

"Even were the government so constituted that an honest attempt could be made to relieve the sufferers; even had the government at its disposal the immense sums of money which would be necessary to relieve the distressed, thousands more would perish before help could reach them, even supposing that the inclemency of a Russian winter would permit the free transportation of supplies."

MINISTER PORTER IS HOME

Believed That He Comes on An Important Mission.

The New Orleans Affair Brought to Mind Again By His Hurried Trip Across the Atlantic.

New York, Nov. 16.—Albert G. Porter, United States minister to Italy, arrived yesterday on the steamship Normania and after a few hour's stop proceeded on a fast express to Washington.

This sudden and unannounced arrival leads many to believe that he has been hurriedly summoned to Washington to confer with the president and the secretary of state on the present situation of the controversy with Italy, growing out of the Mafia troubles in New Orleans.

It is more than probable that Italy has taken advantage of the trouble between the United States and Chili to make a demand for an apology and a money indemnity for the killing of two of her subjects in New Orleans.

Minister Porter refused to give any reason for his hasty and secret trip to Washington.

IMMORALITY IN THE ARMY.

The French Minister of War to Put a Stop to It.

The Soldiers Are Going Back to Vicious Habits That Ruled Under the Late Napoleon.

Paris, Nov. 16.—The minister of war has directed a thorough inquiry as to alleged instances of immorality in the army.

He is resolved to stamp out vicious practices which, it is said, were especially prevalent in the time of the late Napoleon and were supposed to have virtually disappeared with the other evils that attended the gilded pageant of the empire.

Of late circumstances have come to light that leave no doubt of a moral relapse in certain quarters, and the case at Chalons is said to be not exceptional.

WAS A CLEVER THIEF,

But Was Caught and Sent to Prison.

A Woman's Method of Swindling Merchants.

She Filled Her House With Organs and Pianos, Bought on Time, and Then Mortgaged Them for Various Sums.

Philadelphia, Nov. 16.—(Special)—A petite, good-looking woman of good address and very shrewd, took possession of the house No. 3332 Walnut street, on June 1, 1890. Her name was given out as Mrs. Scull, and she had with her a very pretty young woman named Minnie, whom it was stated was her niece.

The house was nicely furnished, a piano or organ being gradually placed in almost very room of the commodious residence. Many students frequented the place.

During the latter part of 1890 and the early portion of 1891 a number of piano and organ stores were visited by a nice-looking, affable little woman, who entered into various negotiations for the lease and purchase of pianos. The woman, who gave her name as Mrs. Mary Brooks, said she resided at 3332 Walnut street with her daughter Minnie. She went, among others, to the store of C. J. Heppe, on Chestnut street, and made arrangements to lease a piano worth $375 at $10 per month for thirty months, with the option of purchasing it at the end of that time for a specified sum.

The next day she sent her daughter to test the piano and after that it was transfered to 3332 Walnut street. The piano was subsequently recovered by Mr. Heppe from a storage warehouse on a sheriff's writ.

North & Co.'s store was also patronized by Mrs. Brooks, who purchased an organ, on which she paid $23, and a piano, on which she paid $25. The large balances have never been paid.

A gasoline stove and oven was bought by Mrs. Brooks from James J. McLaughlin, of Haverford avenue, but never paid for. There were other pianos and much costly furniture secured by Mrs. Brooks in a similar manner, and none of which was ever fully paid for.

Collectors began running to the house every day, but none of them ever succeeded in getting more than a promise to do something in the future. The collector from McLaughlin's called three times a week and rang the bell until the next-door neighbors complained of the annoyance.

In May last Mrs. Brooks called on H. L. Dean and requested a loan of $130 on an organ, a piano and a wardrobe. He sent George F. Hardy to the house to appraise the articles and, as Mrs. Brooks made affidavit that the goods were hers and that she was a widow, the loan was negotiated.

The things were leased to Mrs. Brooks at $28.17 per month. Appraiser Hardy was sent to collect the first installment, but was unable to get in the house, though he could see that it was occupied.

He loitered in the neighborhood until he saw the letter-carrier pass. He thought the inmates might expect a letter and he rang the bell. Mrs. Brooks came to the door, and when she saw who was there she said:

"Oh! I'll settle that matter." Then calling "Sam! Sam!" she shut the door in the astonished appraiser's face.

A few days thereafter Mr. Dean received a letter from Mrs. Brooks stating that she was going across the ocean and would remit the instalments from England. Mr. Dean took the first car to 3332 Walnut street, but was unable to get any response to his vigorous pulls at the door-bell, and he had a warrant issued for the arrest of Mrs. Mary Brooks.

This was served about two months later by Magistrate Clement's constable, who got in the back way and found the house empty, with the exception of some lamps and bric-a-brac. He found there a nice-looking little English woman, who said that she was Miss Ella Ellis and that Mrs. Mary Brooks, her sister, who was moving, would return in a short time for the bric-a-brac.

The constable declined to wait and took Miss Ellis on the warrant that called for the arrest of Mrs. Brooks.

Miss Ellis was held in the Quarter Sessions court on charges of larceny by bailee and false pretense. She swore that her name was Ella Ellis, that Mary Brooks was her sister and that Minnie Brooks was her niece.

She said that all the witnesses who had identified her as Mary Brooks were mistaken, and that she never had any business dealings with any of them.

A next-door neighbor identified Ella Ellis as the woman who lived at 3332 Walnut street as Mrs. Scull and Mrs. Brooks.

Counsel left the case to the charge of the court and Judge Bregy said: "Gentlemen of the jury, this is a question solely for you to solve. If you believe this defendant is Mary Brooks she should be convicted; if you do not so believe she should be acquitted."

The jury lost little time in finding her guilty. In passing sentence Judge Bregy said: "If you had pleaded guilty and not committed perjury of the rankest kind to lie out of these charges, I would have given you but one-half the sentence I now impose, which is that you serve 18 months in the Eastern penitentiary."

WILL ALMY PLEAD GUILTY?

The Jury Panel in His Case Has Been Discharged.

Believed That He Will Go Before a Judge and Ask for Mercy—The Trial Set for To-Morrow.

Plymouth, N. H., Nov. 16.—Frank C. Almy may yet save his precious neck. The fate of the murderer of beautiful Christie Warden, who was slain one moonlight night in July on the lonely road which led to her country home in Hanover, has been bet upon here under the shadow of the court house, one to five being placed and taken that he will never hang.

The trial was set for to-morrow, Tuesday. But like a flash of lightning out of a clear sky comes the announcement that the extra panel of jurors, 80 in number, has been discharged, or at least notified that their attendance at court will not be required at present.

Postal cards did the business. Charles E. Griswold, clerk of the court, sent these little missives to the 80 men at their homes. One of those postal cards fell, by an accident, under the eye of a reporter, and the cat was out of the bag. What does it mean?

It can hardly mean but one of two things either, that for some reason undivulged, the trial by jury has been postponed or that the counsel for the defence have induced the murderer to change his plea, have a hearing before the judges alone and accept their decree.

Counsel for the defense states that as far as he knows the trial will proceed Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. That would seem to dispose of the question of postponement. What's left is nothing but inference that Almy will change his plea and the judges will be the jury.

Omaha, Nov. 16.—Nettie Bittler, who claimed to be a fast friend of Capt. Hattie Smith, of the Salvation army, shot and mortally wounded her last night and then killed herself. There was no known motive for the deed, and the sad affair is shrouded in the deepest mystery.

CANADA HAS MANY ILLS.

The Dominion is in a Critical Position.

The Toronto News Points the Way Wherein the Great Burden Can Be Lifted.

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 16.—The News, a conservative paper, in a significant article on "The Position of Canada," says that the population statistics recently issued by the dominion government has caused a feeling of unrest and discontent, and that there is too much reason to fear a feeling in favor of a radical change in our political status on the lines advocated by Sol White and others, that is even greater and more general than appears on the surface.

The News continues: "That our present trade relations with other countries are not such as promise relief from our unfortunate condition of semi-stagnation may be acknowledged. We are not only shut out of the United States market, but are in a fair way of being excluded from the market of every state on this continent which is of use to us.

"The big republic already has a treaty of commerce with Brazil, with Cuba, with Porto Rica and with San Domingo, and negotiations are in progress for the extension of what looks like the beginning of a great American zollverein, with Canada left out. Over the ocean the prospect is but little more encouraging.

We have the open market of Great Britian, but every other nation has the same. The farmers of the United States have this great advantage over us, they have not only their home market, from which we are about to be shut out, and they also have, save in the matter of cattle, just the same facilities for selling their products in the English market that we have."

"The News concludes: "But if our present position is bad there is a way out of it. In fact there are two ways. If the dominion will signify its readiness to accept commercial union, we could have all Americans have to offer us in the way of markets. On the other hand we are in a position to make a trade arrangement with the mother country.

"We can offer her absolutely free entry for all her manufactured goods in return for a discriminatory tariff in favor of our products of field, forest, mine and sea entering Great Britian. Two courses are, therefore, open. One or the other must be taken, as it is impossible that we should go on as at present, shut out of the markets of this continent and met on equal terms by our rivals in the mother country."

WAS A WOMAN IN IT?

The St. Johns Murder Mystery May Yet Be Solved.

Detective Bourquin is Working on a Clue That May Lead to the Capture of the Guilty Parties.

Wapakoneta, O., Nov. 16.—(Special)—"Murder will out," and at last the murder of Capt. William Herring, postmaster and prominent citizen of St. Johns, a small hamlet six miles east of this city, who was found foully slain near his residence on the night of September 19, was brought to light Saturday by United States Detective Alex. Bourquin, who made some startling discoveries.

He says that on the night of the murder there were three men and a woman heavily veiled who were seen driving toward the residence of Capt. Herring. He will not give any disclosures or names, but has the parties spotted so that he can arrest them in a few days, when some startling facts will be unveiled.

PRETTY BIG CONCERN,

Is the Extended Grocery Establishment

Run by the Hustling Armstrong & Clarke—A Bee Takes a Walk Through the Store.

For three years past the big grocery store of Armstrong & Clarke, on the corner of Superior and Adams streets, has been an object of interest, and the appreciation of the public has been shown in a substantial manner by their increasing trade.

It has been necessary to enlarge the store several times, and another addition has just been made. When the water works department moved into the next room, their former office was taken by Armstrong & Clarke, and it has since been connected with their main store by a large arch and is now used for office purposes and a check room, through which all goods going out to the city trade are handled. The meats and flours are also in this new room.

With the changes caused by this addition to their space the arrangement of the whole store was somewhat changed, and many improvements were made, until now Armstrong & Clarke probably have the best arranged and best stocked grocery between New York and Chicago.

Although the room occupied by this firm is not of a great size, yet it is larger than appearances would indicate, every inch of space being utilized to the best advantage for the display and storage of goods.

A number of large new cases have been put in the store, several of which are worthy of especial mention for the immense capacity for holding a large quantity of stock and also displaying it in neat form. One large case holds the dried fruits and nuts, and by a series of glass compartments, every variety is well shown off, yet the arrangement is such that all is kept perfectly clean and no flies or dirt can get in. Then under this case is a large place for the storage of canned goods.

The coffee, cocoa and chocolate department has been changed, and is now well located near the cashier's desk in the southwest corner of the big room. The butter and cheese and cracker department are also near by, and all of them have more room than formerly. One great advantage of this big store is the arrangement of its departments, which are complete stores in themselves, all so managed as not to interfere with others, yet everything is displayed so that whatever is wanted can be easily found

As Mr. Armstrong says: "If we can display our goods we can sell them, and that is the secret of the attractiveness of our store. If you don't show off your goods, people won't know you have them."

A new set of large cases has been built for the wines and liquors, and these are located in a department opening on to Superior street by the second door.

The cellar of this store is also a sight to see, for here is stored enough stock for several ordinary sized stores. There is also in the cellar a latest improved Burns coffee roaster, with a capacity of 150 pounds, a spice mill and a big ice cream freezer, the power for all of which as well as the coffee grinder and pulverizer upstairs, is furnished by an electric motor.

A large amount of ales, stout, wines and champagne is stored in the cellar, and here also is the bottling department.

An elevator connects the cellar, first floor and second floor, and on the latter is located the candy manufacturing department. The candies of Armstrong & Clarke have made an enviable name for themselves by their freshness and purity, and it is all manufactured by themselves.

There is also a large quantity of goods stored on the second floor, and half the basement of the Bennett building is likewise used by this firm for the storage of heavy goods.

This description gives only a hurried glance into this fine store, but there is much else there that is interesting, as in their various departments can be found everything to eat, and pantry, kitchen and cellar can be stocked from this one place. The fresh vegetable display in the store is always interesting; here the latest goods are always shown in an attractive manner that is seen nowhere else, and everything looks so inviting that the good housekeeper cannot resist the temptation to buy.

The meats, the cheese and the butter are also always in first-class shape, and the secret of this is the fact that they are kept in refrigerators of the latest make and each article in an air-tight compartment by itself, so that it can absorb no taint.

Taken all in all, the big grocery of Armstrong & Clarke is as complete as an establishment of the kind can be made, and it is a credit as well as a great convenience to the city.

HANCOCK'S BIG WOODS

Believed To Be Inhabited By Wild Men.

An Effort Will be Made to Penetrate the Brush and Solve the Mystery.

St. Louis, Nov. 16.—A Findlay special to the Republic says:

Extending through the townships of Liberty, Blanchard and Pleasant in this county is a tract of land known as "the big woods," which is almost impenetrable, owing to the underbrush, old logs and swales.

For years the impression has prevailed that several "wild men" were living in these vast wildernesses of tangled vines and low undergrowth, and at various times it has been reported by hunters and farmers looking for lost animals that these strange denizens of the forest have been seen, but no one has ever been able to get near enough to talk to them. Those who have caught sight of these alleged "wild men" say they are uncouth, with long matted hair and beards, and dressed in all manner of ragged clothing.

Farmers living in the vicinity of these woods frequently miss old clothes and cooking utensils, but nothing of any great value. These losses are sometimes charged to tramps, though many believe these "wild men" took them. Rude brush and bark huts are occasionally found in the depths of these wilds, with indications that they have been used for a great length of time. From the adjoining fields, considerable quantities of corn and potatoes are taken in the summer and fall by the "wild men," and it is easy to understand how they live during the pleasant months of the year, but how they subsist in the winter is a question which has not yet been solved. There is a large cave in the low hills, near Indian Green, where they may go in the cold weather, and a party will be made up in a few weeks to hunt them down and ascertain if possible, who they are, and why they are leading this strange life.

LIVING FOR SPITE.

The members of his family didn't grieve enough over the prospect of his death to suit Coleman, and in his wrath he resolved to live in order to spite them. He has had the coffin lined with zinc and now uses it for a bathtub.

THE POPE'S WORD GOES.

St. Louis, Nov. 16.—Monsigneur O'Brien, who fills the office of chamberlain in the court of Pope Leo XIII. at Rome, is in this city. Monsigneur O'Brien indorses the recently expressed opinion of Archbishop Corrigan on the subject.

THE FOLLY OF ATHEISM.

Synopsis of An Eloquent and Interesting Sermon

Preached by Rev. And. J. Fish, D. D, Pastor of St. John's M. E. Church, Last Night.

St. John's M. E. church, on Magnolia street, was completely filled at the service last night to hear the pastor, Rev. A. J. Fish, D. D., talk on "The Folly of Atheism." A few weeks ago, Mr. Fish read as the morning lesson, the 53d Psalm, beginning "The fool hath said in his heart there is no God," and in a day or two he received a note, written in a feminine hand, asking some questions touching the verses read, and in answer to this note the pastor took up the text given. The closest attention was paid to every word uttered. Synopsis of the sermon follows in answer to requests, the Bee regretting that it cannot be given in its entirety:

Psalms, 53, 1.—The fool hath said in his heart there is no God.

The reverend gentleman prefaced his sermon by reading the 38th chapter from the Mohammedan Bible, entitled "The Creator," and at once began: Is that man to be called a fool, who in real sincerity declares there is no God? Is it, indeed, folly of the supremest type, that one who has never seen or touched him, should call out in bold challenge that he does not exist? These are the questions I have been requested to answer from this text. The Psalmist has already done so. Is he warranted in making such an extreme statement?

Let me ask you to-night to give your imagination the widest wildest play in which it has ever indulged. In fancy construct a ship which shall float upon the breezes of the atmosphere. Now, jump aboard, give the signal, and sail off a half mile upwards, casting anchor in mid air. When you are safely moored, look down upon the earth, and imagine that every thing begins to perish under your gaze. The vegetation is scorched by a burning sun, the animal life all dies, man sorrowfully takes his departure, the earth itself begins to tremble, the clouds no longer burst with rain, the stars above are tottering, the beautiful moon pales, and at last the grand old sun dies. For ages he has been sending down his life giving beams, warming the sod, gathering the vapors, kissing the cheeks of the plants and of men, and causing all beneath him to thrill with his touch, but, alas, his funeral knell is sounded by his own dying fires. He is gone, gone.

"Only a passing spark of fire,
A transient meteor in the sky,
He rushes on and soon is gone,
For he was only born to die."

Where are you now? Out there in space all alone, all nature perished, and darkness brooding over the face of the monster deep. You may hoist your sails, lift or deck your anchor, gird well your ship, take your place at the wheel, and float at your pleasure, whithersoever you will. No harm can come to you, for there are no obstacles anywhere. Out in the broad spaces, up the immeasurable heights, down in the awful depths, you may sail on, unhurt, for all save yourself and your tiny craft has passed away. Now, without a thought of where you yourself have come from, and forgetful of the character of the material out of which your little vessel is builded, ask yourself how all the wonderful creation which has just perished can be replaced? Know what is possible by what you remember of what has been. Know there is room by what you experience in your dreadful sailing through the boundless spaces. Know what is desirable, by the immortal yearnings of your own lonely heart. Know where to begin and how to go on by the fires of genius and of inspiration which burn within you.

Answer, now, without a god of some sort, this puzzling question of all human intelligence, how has this universe been builded, by telling us how it can be replaced. Ah, you say I will seek the invisible and invisible atoms, the beginnings of matter out of which the previous creation was formed, and will somehow persuade them to come together in cleaving affinities, until new hulks are reared, and new worlds are possible. I will find the tiny bioplasts, the marvelous life germs, out of which all living organisms had come to be, and attract them toward each other, until sweet marital relations are formed, and life is again seen on the face of the new earth. Hold, hold, in a world without God, you are making of yourself a god.

Remember, that in the old system passed away, the atoms and the bioplasts, whatever they may mean, belonged to him, as you now claim them for yourself. Remember, that men when formed will ask you whence come the atoms, just as they have asked you whence came the world. If you say you do not know, they will suggest, as men have always done before, that, possibly, God made them, and if you say, there is no God, they will ask you how you know that. Remember, also, that when you talk of indivisible atoms, men will shake their heads and laugh, for every atom of matter has dimensions, and occupies some portion of space, and may always occupy less space. You will be asked to halve them, and quarter them, and still resolve them into smaller parts, in order to find the beginning of things. And, when you have returned bodies of matter, back to their component parts, men will be asking you to put them together again, just as I am asking you to rebuild the world which you have seen perish.

Have you ever thought seriously upon this fact, that it is no part of creation to divide things, but to put them together. You may know of what a body is formed, but what of it, if you do not know how to form it again. What matter is it, that you can tell me of what the human body is composed, so long as you must let these parts be labeled on the shelves and in the jars and caskets of your laboratory, and can not ferret out the hidings of the wonderful sovereign "Life," who alone has been able to weld them together, and give them mission and power.

Here is a crystal of sugar. You resolve it into its simple elements. They are three: hydrogen, oxygen and carbon. Well, here is the world full of these, and you know the proportions. Take them in such quantities as you want, and form a single crystal of sugar. You take hydrogen and oxygen and produce water, but sugar is vegetable, and comes from life, and only the life in the maple, in the cane, and in the beet, drawing these simple substances together in the sap and juice of the living forms can produce sugar. Sugar is beyond your power without this marvelous and wise helper. Who is he, and how is he? Tell us, or we will think God made him. But remember, again, that when once men have known a thing to be, they will ask how it came to be, and if you cannot take the place of a god, and cause it to be, they will conceive of and believe in a God who has caused it to be. This is the universal verdict of humanity. Mohammedans, Pagans, Christians, by multiplied millions hav so decreed. He who says there is no God, must stand up in the face of this universal conviction, and disabuse their minds, by first telling them how these things can be, and then demonstrate his theory by producing them, or their like.

Now, is a man immersed in consummate folly who says there is no God? I do not hesitate to affirm that no sane man dare say that, except at the risk that the intelligence of the world will so declare of him. The sweet singer of Israel but voices the all-prevailing thought of the race when he says, 'The fool hath said there is no God." No, no; a sound mind will not say it. Such a man may say, "I do not know that there is a God; I have never seen God. God has never touched my consciousness and caused it to respond until it recognized him," but he dare not say he does not exist. In the year 1800 chemists said there were 27 simple substances, and 50 years ago they told us there were 49, but we know there are 66. Dare the chemist of half a century back say, "There are no such substances as aluminium, as erbium, as rubidium, as gallium. No, he dare not if he would retain his name as a thinker. Dare we to-day say there are but 66, no more, and there can be no more. No, or we cannot blame thinkers if they declare we have lost our senses. No more can a sane man to-day say "There is no God." The whole world will at once challenge him by declaring, "We have found him, for he has inspired poets, he has given conceptions to artists, he has illuminated the realms of thought, he has indexed the civilizations of the world." The great thinkers everywhere have gathered around him, and the great libraries of the world have discussed his existence and power. He has quickened the touch of the great painters, has helped Murillo in his Madonna, Raphael in his Transfiguration, Durer in his Face of Jesus, Leonardo in his Last Supper, Angelo in his Kneeling Saints, and Rubens in that matchless conception, The Descent from the Cross. All, all have felt the touch of his power and hailed him as God. The thought will ennoble you and quicken the forces of your manhood, and under his touch all the mightiest powers of your being will be developed. Give him an entrance into your heart of hearts, and he will open up worlds to your vision, render keen the powers of your intellect, and strike springs of sensibility within you, of which your present grand inheritance is but the morning dream.

CATHOLIC KNIGHTS

Celebrate the Tenth Anniversary of Their Birth.

Grand Entertainment at St. Mary's Hall Last Evening—Every Cent of O'Brien's Defalcation Made Good.

Over 200 covers were laid for the banquet given under the auspices of St. Martin's branch, No. 149, Catholic Knights of America, at St. Mary's school hall, Cherry street, last evening, and seldom has such an elaborate banquet been spread or more thoroughly appreciated.

The event was the tenth anniversary of the organization of St. Martin's (German) branch, No. 149, C. K. of A., and it was an unqualified and pronounced success.

The hall, which was tastefully and beautifully decorated for the occasion, was packed to its utmost, when Mr. P. G. Mettler, who acted as master of ceremonies, proposed the first toast, "Pope Leo XIII."

It was responded to by Rev. M. Zoeller, S. J., who delivered an eloquent address. He referred more especially to the pope's recent pronunciamento on the labor question as showing how his holiness was in sympathy with the masses. He also spoke of the pope's indorsement of Catholic societies.

"The Catholic Knights of America" was responded to by Supreme Treasurer Chas. J. Kirschner, who detailed at length the origin, rise and progress of the organization. He gave an interesting sketch of the mode in which money is distributed and received. It is impossible without the signature of the three principal officers to draw any money. Mr. Kirschner made the interesting announcement that every cent of the O'Brien defalcation had been made good, and the statement was received with great applause.

"They said our credit was not good," he continued, "and gave it out that we were obliged to put up $150,000 of our sinking fund bonds to get $50,000. It is untrue. Seasongood & Mayer, of Cincinnati, not only advanced us $50,000 on $50,000 of bonds as collateral, but offered to give us what money we needed on our personal note." Mr. Kirschner in concluding predicted a bright future for the C. K. of A.

A. F. Kaelin in a brief but happy speech responded to the toast, "Catholic Societies:"

"The Founder of St. Martin's Branch," was responded to by Melchior Schaal, president of the branch. He paid a tribute to the founder, P. J. Mettler, and gave an interesting history of the society from the time of its organization, 10 years ago.

"The School Question" was responded to by the Rev. Father Kamp, S. J. He said the Catholics were willing to contribute their share towards the support of the public schools as heretofore, but they demanded the right to give their children a religious education and the state had no right to interfere.

Anton Seum spoke to the toast, "St. Martin's Branch" in a lengthy address. He referred to its inception and the good work it had done during the past 10 years in works of charity.

"St. Mary's Parish" was responded to by John Henry, who gave an interesting history of the start and progress of the parish. In 1854, 25 German Catholics met with Rev. Chas. Evrard and organizer St. Mary's parish. It has now grown to be one of the first in the diocese, with over 1,000 families and about 5,000 communicants.

Theo. Schmidt was at home in his response to "Our Ladies; God Bless Them." It was the happiest speech of the evening, and its humor and wit seemed to catch the assemblage, for it was heartily applauded.

"Our Guests" was responded to by Jacob Effler, who, in behalf of St. Martin's branch, thanked the visitors for their presence and hoped they would come again.

The supper was excellent and the good ladies of the parish—the wives, mothers, sweethearts and sisters of the members of the branch—received many gracious compliments for the excellence of the banquet.

Uhl Bros.' orchestra and St. Mary's choir, under the direction of Prof. Christian Zitter, rendered music which simply charmed the appreciative audience.

The following committee had charge of arrangements, and to the members is due in a great degree the success attained: Melchior Schaal, Peter J. Mettler, John J. Kessler, Anton Seum, John J. Vollmayer, John W. Schoen, Albert J. Geller, Laurent Schott, Joseph E. Borges, John G. Gilsdorf, Bernard H. Holtgreive, Theodore Schmitt, Jacob Effler, Charles H. Epker, Chas. J. Kirschner, John F. Neuhausel, H. C. Kuebler, Bernard Schramm, Chas. Himmelsbach.

How about the prudence of allowing a cough to run on, rasping the pulmonary and bronchial organs, when that approved and speedy remedy, Dr. Jayne's Expectorant, can be obtained from any apothecary.

HOMELESS GIRLS.

Several of Them Drop Into the City on the Same Day.

A bevy of unfortunate girls struck the city Saturday and applied to the infirmary department for relief. They were six in number and went to the office in pairs so that it is not known whether they came to the city together or not. They told various doleful stories and all were without friends and wanted help. Situations were found for several of them in good families and afterwards one of them was found to be in an interesting condition. Two other girls wanted to get out of town and at the free employment office a situation was found for them at a Tiffin hotel and they went there Saturday night. These two girls were sisters, and, from their story, have been knocking about the country considerable of late.

ANOTHER INJUNCTION

Granted Against the Shutting Off of Gas at Grasser & Brand's.

In common pleas court late Saturday afternoon the Grasser & Brand Brewing company filed action for an injunction restraining the natural gas trustees of Toledo from shutting off the supply of fuel gas from the brewery in this city.

The petition states that on October 16, 1891, the board of gas trustees entered into a contract with the Grasser & Brand Brewing company, agreeing to supply natural gas as fuel for the brewery of the company, located on St. Clair street, for the period of one year.

It further states that the trustees notified the company that the gas would be shut off November 16, 1891.

It is claimed that the supply of gas is amply sufficient and that there is no excuse for turning the gas off.

It is further claimed that the machinery and brewing apparatus had been adapted to the use of natural gas, and that it is necessary with the refrigerating apparatus to keep and maintain a certain temperature in the cooling cellars and vaults of its brewery, in which there are $40,000 worth of beer stored, and unless this temperature is maintained the beer will be ruined.

Judge Pugsley granted a temporary injunction restraining the trustees from shutting off the gas until November 23, which day has been fixed for a hearing of the motion.

A COLUMN OF SMILES.

She was not quite ready to receive him, says the New York Press, so she sent her little brother to entertain him while she put the finishing touches to her toilet.

The entertainment was lively if not satisfactory.

"You are Ethel's beau, ain't you?" the youthful prospective brother-in-law began.

"Yes," said the youth, pleasantly.

"You have money in the bank, haven't you?"

"Yes."

"And you expect to keep it in your own name after you're married to Ethel?"

"Well—er—yes."

"Well, Ethel will have something to say about that."

Ethel's beau began to feel uncomfortable.

"You smoke, don't you?" continued the inquisitor.

"Yes, a little."

"And you expect to smoke after you are married to Ethel?"

"Ye-es."

"Well, Ethel will have something to say about that?"

Ethel's beau felt more uncomfortable than ever.

"You belong to a club, don't you?" pursued the self-possessed urchin.

"Ye-es."

"And you expect to belong to it after you are married to Ethel?"

"I suppose so."

"Well, Ethel will have something to say about that."

Ethel's beau was growing red in the face.

"You play billiards, don't you?" continued the boy.

"Yes, sometimes."

"And you expect to play sometimes after you're married to Ethel?"

"I do."

"Well, Ethel will have something to say about that."

"Look here, my young friend," said the exasperated lover; "I've got an important engagement which I forgot. I'm going to attend to it. You tell Ethel I've gone, and see what she has to say about that."

And he went.

She Knew Her Papa.

A little girl aged 9 called her father to her bedside the other evening. "Papa," said the little diplomat, "I want to ask your advice."

"Well, my little dear, what is it about?"

"What do you think it would be best to give me on my birthday?"—Texas Siftings.

Very Polite.

"Is this Nel Phillpot?" the justice asked, addressing a little nappy-headed negro.

"Yes, sah, thankee, ef you please."

"Been drung again?"

"Yes, sah, thankee."

"Been here some ten times within the last year, haven't you?"

"Yes, sah, thankee, 'bleeged ter you."

"When are you going to quit?"

"Doan' know, thankee, sah."

"I believe I'll send you to the workhouse for 25 days."

"Thankee, sah."

"Look here, what makes you so polite?"

"Kain't he'p it, thankee, sah; born in me, I reckons."

"Well, I think I'll let you off this time. Politeness ought to be rewarded."

"'Bleeged ter yer, sah, thankee."

When the little old negro was gone the justice said: "There can't help but be some little good in so polite a man. He may be a drunkard, but—but—"

"What are you looking for, judge?" some one asked.

"Why, that red silk handkerchief. It was lying on this desk a moment ago."

The little old negro walked along the street. "Dis yere handkerchuck is good fur two drinks," said he.—Arkansaw Traveler.

Freedom Imperiled.

"I see," said Oldclerk, looking up from his newspaper, "that they want to throw out the vote of one of the election precincts."

"Precinct where the feller was spending the money taken out of the City hall boys' salaries?" asked Nooclerk.

"Naw! That goes all right."

"Precinct where the republican judge took the box home and examined the ballots?"

"What's the matter with you? That's O. K."

"Well, what precinct, then?"

"Precinct where they think a woman voted."—Chicago Times.

Dignity in Defeat.

Boy (all used up)—Ye-yes, sir.

A Recipe.

"What is an Americanism, anyhow?"

"Well, when an Englishman in writing wants to use an original bit of slang or some vulgarism of his own, he does it and adds, 'As the Americans say.' That makes the Americanism."—Truth.

Dying on Time.

The cashier of a country bank tells this story:

There came to the bank one day two farmers, one a lender, the other a borrower. The first was going to accommodate the other for 30 days with a certain sum of money.

As the borrower signed the note a suspicion entered his accommodating friend's mind. "Supposing," he said, dubiously, "you should die——"

The suspected one looked up, astonishment and indignation shining on his face. "Why, confound it," said forcibly, "whoever heard of anybody dying in 30 days."

The Exception.

Madison Squeer: "They say that one-half of the world doesn't know how the other half lives." Morrison Essex: "The man who wrote that never lived in a small town."—Puck.

A Welcome Relief.

Sea Captain: "There is no hope! The ship is doomed! In an hour we will all be dead!" Seasick Passenger: 'Thank heaven!"—New York Weekly.

Why He Laughed.

Barclay, who is undergoing severe punishment because he had been suspected of letting a kitten loose in the schoolroom, laughs as though he enjoyed it. Teacher (banging up the rod): "Barclay, why do you laugh?" Barclay: "I can't help it, Miss Bray. You've whipped the wrong boy."—Harper's Young People.

Hostilities Renewed.

"Been traveling far?" asked one passenger of another on an eastbound Chesapeake & Ohio train the other day, says the Philadelphia Press.

"From the west."

"The far west?"

"Mississippi river region."

"St. Louis?"

"Sir! do I look like a St. Louis man?"

"Well, really, I don't know just how a St. Louis man looks."

"I thought not. I accept your apology."

Further up the river, I suppose?"

"Certainly. I'm from Minneapolis, sir."

"In trade?"

"Wheat."

"Good churches out there?"

"The best in the country."

"What question is exciting them the most now?"

"Well, sir, the woman business has got us by the ears."

"How so?"

"Well, I'm in favor of women taking an active part in church matters."

"Quite right."

"But I was not always of that way of thinking."

"No? What changed your ideas?"

"Well, sir, a strange minister spoke in our church one day and went through a great rigmarole about how St. Paul was opposed to women in the churches, and I'm too loyal a Minneapolis man to knuckle to any St. Paul dictation."

How to save money is a problem that interests everybody. One way to do it is to invigorate the system with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Being a highly concentrated blood medicine, it is the most powerful and economical. It is sold for a dollar a bottle, but worth five.

Honors are easy. Sherman says Foraker is deceived and Foraker says Sherman is deceived.

The official majority of Senator Stewart in the Thirteenth district was 689, very good indeed under the cyclonic circumstances.

A Blaine-Foraker senatorial combination, as hinted from Washington, would make things very interesting for John Sherman in Ohio.

They do say that Sherman has opened a barrel. Tut, tut, the idea of a republican senatorial candidate doing such a thing is preposterous!

John Sherman will be re-elected in spite of all the rag-tag and bob-tail of politics.—Cleveland Leader.

It is fair to presume the Leader had in mind the Toledo Blade with its Ghost of a Hate when it spoke of the rag-tag and bob-tails.

A Columbus republican paper says all the candidates for speaker are on the senatorial fence, and will not come off until caucus time. A mistake as to one man. Mr. Griffin is trying to get on the fence from the Foraker side, but doesn't succeed very well.

The person most interested in what Griffin said is Hon. C. A. Flickinger, and he believes the reporter did not misquote the Collingwood statesman. And no honeyed words that Mr. Griffin can now use will mend matters. It was the fatal break of an over-ambitious statesman.

If W. I. Squire uses all of his six hundred league clubs to help Mr. Foraker as it is intimated he will, there will be a lively time in Columbus for several parties. It is understood Mr. Squire has the promise of the railroad commissionership, which signifies that he has very close political relations with Gov. McKinley. The use of the clubs by Squire also signifies that McKinley approves such a course, and tacitly commits the new Governor to Foraker in the senatorial scramble. The Sherman managers would better look after Squire and his clubs.

The full Iowa returns show the largest vote ever polled in the state. A summary of the votes show that the Alliance vote went to the democrats, and that a gain was made of Harrison votes in 1888. From the division of the prohibition vote it is plain that it was divided between the parties in such proportions as to eliminate prohibition as a factor in the result. From 44.58 per cent. of a total vote of 404,000, in '88, the democrats have advanced to 49.03 per cent. of the total vote of 420,000 in 1891, while the republican percentage has fallen from 52.35 to 47.40 (in 1891). It is the independent, agricultural vote that has reinforced the democracy, said and acknowledged.

"Reciprocity has come to stay," says a jubilant New York republican newspaper. To this sentiment every friend of tariff reform will say amen. The word applied to commerce is synonymous with free trade. It is the forerunner of free trade, and, extended to many items of our lumbering, cumbrous tariff schedule, will enlarge the factories of America and make shipping from our shores profitable in every direction. True, the application of reciprocity in the present law is a republican act of stealing democratic thunder, but patriots need not concern themselves about the agents of good, if the act itself is worthy of praise. We sincerely hope reciprocity has come to stay. Give the country more of it, much of it—our people can stand all congress will provide. Throw down a few more courses of restriction from the prohibitive wall and the country will experience an era of revival and prosperity.

Roger Q. Mills has the courage of his convictions. A story started by somebody that he had made a compact with eastern interests to pack the committee on coinage against free silver in the event of his election as speaker, secured for him considerable eastern support. The Boston Herald and nearly all the New England democratic papers espoused his cause. The thirteen New England democratic representatives were favorable to his election. Mr. Mills is an ardent free silver coinage advocate and cannot afford to sail under false colors. In a letter to the Herald he emphatically denies having bargained for anti-silver support, and stands by his life record. This letter will probably lose him much eastern support, but it certainly will not lessen his grip on votes in the south and west. The silver question cannot be smothered by the coming congress. A large number of the democratic members were elected upon that issue, and they must stand by their guns this winter. The great issue is the tariff, but coinage is bound to be a factor in legislation and politics the coming year.

The Toronto Empire says the Opposition are not able to suggest any kind of reciprocity with the United States that will not involve discrimination against the Motherland. They knew how to do it in 1874, but have now lost the art, and are pledged in favor of a policy that will do for Canada what it has done for the United States: induce a heavy decline in the commerce with Britain and curtail steamship services between British and United States ports. Mr. Laurier, the leader of the Opposition, will make a speech at a Boston banquet of the board of trade; the Empire says he will go over and tell the States how completely Canada is at their mercy on the trade question; it says he would "better stay at home and discuss the matter with his own countrymen in lieu of making compromising speeches for American politicians to interpret as a movement toward the extinction of the Dominion." The burning hatred of England as a campaign sentiment for United States republicans is balanced by the tory hatred of the United States in Canada. Democrats and liberals believe in peace and good will and amicable trade relations.

Some of the Cleveland newspapers are furious over Judge Jackson's decision in the gas case, one of them, the Press, denouncing it as an outrage upon the city, the state and the judiciary of Ohio. A reading of such portion of the text of the decision as has been published, places the opinion in a somewhat different light than the first reports led one to believe. The case is peculiar to itself, inasmuch as the Cleveland Gaslight Company obtained its charter from the state in 1846, five years prior to the adoption of the present constitution. Its absolute rights were defined in the charter, and the constitution then in force did not confer upon the general assembly the power to delegate authority to municipalities to change the price which the companies similar to the Cleveland corporation should charge. Hence the court held that the council of Cleveland superseded its powers when it arbitrarily reduced the price of illuminating gas from one dollar to sixty cents a thousand cubic feet. The present constitution contemplates regulation and the laws under the constitution have provided for such regulation. The decision of Judge Jackson will not affect any corporation organized since 1851.

THE LAND OF MEXICO.

A Great Chance for Yankee Ingenuity.

The People Are Slow to Profit From the Immense Natural Resources Placed at Their Doors.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The Bureau of American Republics has received a very important report upon commercial and industrial opportunities offered in the Republic of Mexico.

In the textile industry there is a great demand for women's scarfs and shawls, counterpanes, toweling and napkins, for ordinary cotton articles and for fancy articles on which there is a heavy import duty.

The use of steam in the manufacture of sugar is limited to a few factories and this industry is backward, although Mexico is an ideal country for its production.

Distilling is in an equally undeveloped state and the iron foundries produce only small wares. The paper manufacture is limited to wrapping paper, cardboard, and printing paper.

Mexico imports half her consumption, though there are in abundance of excellent fabrics for this industry. The mills of this country are, with some exceptions, of a very primitive construction.

Although one of the largest producers of common and cabinet woods the country imports nearly all its cabinet ware at an increased cost of 300 to 400 per cent., due to tariff, freight, and other charges. The establishment of factories near the forests and railroad lines would prove an exceedingly remunerative undertaking.

The abundance of water power, the cheapness of skilled labor, and the aptness of the natives favor the development of this highly protected and scarcely existant industry. Furniture of bent wood, like that of Vienna, is in great demand by the middle classes. Ceramic and crystal articles produced are generally very ordinary.

This industry is highly protected and the raw material abounds. Though sulphuric and nitric acids, etc., are much required, there are in Mexico only two chemical factories. The erection of new factories, favored by an abundance of raw material, cheap labor, high protection, and a large population, would prove a paying investment of capital.

Machinery for the establishment of factories is free of import duty. Mining and agricultural operations offer a profitable but less certain field for investment.

Recent investigations as to the resources of the soluvento district in the state of Vera Cruz, Mex., have developed the fact that uncultivated lands are of great fertility and adapted for extensive agricultural enterprises. The natural products grow in abundance and the entire district abounds with many varieties of valuable fiber plants for textile fabrics and the manufacture of paper. The soil is in parts especially adapted for the cultivation of coffee and for growing cane and tobacco. Agricultural labor is plentiful and wages range from thirty-seven to fifty cents a day.

THE NEW FIFTH

Presbyterian Church Occupied for the First Time Yesterday.

The congregation and pastor of the Fifth Presbyterian church were happy yesterday in the thought of worshiping in their charming new edifice. Services were held for the first time in the new building yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock, conducted by the pastor, Rev. S. D. Conger.

Rev. Conger spoke of the wonderful growth of this church, which came into existence about two years ago with 15 charter members. There is now a membership of over a hundred, and although the church will hold 200, Rev. Conger never preaches to empty seats.

The afternoon services were conducted by Rev. Dr. McGaw, and were interesting and appropriate to the occasion.

The singing by the choir at both services was exceptionally good. The evening services were conducted by the Y. P. S. C. E. of the church. The church will be dedicated the first Sunday in December.

TALKS WITH THE REPS.

On the Absorbing Senatorial Question.

Ex-Mayor Hamilton Has a Word for Ex-Governor Foraker, While a Number Speak for Senator John Sherman.

The senatorial fight is becoming more interesting each day in Toledo, and the local republicans are taking sides in the scrimmage. The Bee, desiring to keep its readers posted on the current sentiment, gives to-day the result of talks with prominent Republicans. One thing is noticeable, and that is most of those who favor Governor Foraker's election are not willing to appear over their own signature, or in other words do not want to father their statements in public print. This is rather peculiar, and is rather an evidence of lack of confidence in the outcome. On the other hand, Sherman's friends say to reporters in effect, "You cannot put me down too strongly for the senator." The public may judge of the cause for themselves.

Here is the result of to-day's talks with republicans.

Thos. Vanstone, vice persident Toledo Savings Bank and Trust Co.—It has been one of the cardinal principles of my life to hold fast to what is tried and true but the people are selected for the offices. What is true in a business way should hold good in politics and it would be a grave mistake to put anyone else in Senator Sherman's place. He has represented us faithfully and has always been right on all great questions.

F. A. Waite, vice president and treasurer The Whitney & Currier Co.—What do I think of the Senatorship? You can say for me that I think it would be a mistake not to return the Hon. John Sherman. I am a warm admirer of Gov. Foraker, but he is a young man and his time will come in the future. Sherman should go to the senate. I consider him the ablest financier in the country.

Ex-Mayor Hamilton—My preference is decidely for Gov. Foraker. The legislature should elect him to the senate mainly for the reason that he is the choice of a large majority of the republicans of the state. Certainly no fair man conversant with public sentiment will deny that he is the choice of the republicans of Lucas county. If the question were submitted to the popular vote of republicans, Foraker would be chosen by a decided majority, and in this county his majority would be overwhelming. Such being the popular sentiment the only question left for consideration should be is he a suitable man? Can there be any doubt of that? He is in the prime of life, a logical and ready debater and reasoner, an elegant and captivating orator, of great executive abilities, of fine presence, popular manners, irreproachable private character, a brave soldier in his youth, a patriot and earnest republican during all his life. Who more than he represents and knows the republicans of Ohio. Four times in state convention he was called to carry the banner of our party as its candidate for governor. Is there any public question upon which he is not well informed? He is a broad-minded, brilliant man, and all citizens of Ohio could be proud of him in the senate. Sherman has been at Washington since 1858. For 30 years he has been senator, except the four years he was secretary of the treasury. If we couldn't get along without him, I should say keep him at the capitol. But no one man now is necessary to the party. Without disparagement to him the legislature could elect another as his successor. Sherman's colleague, and a man very much like him, Edmunds, of Vermont, has retired after a period of service almost as long as Sherman's and the republican party still lives. I want to see new blood in the senate. None of the popular leaders of the party are there. Formerly our greatest orators and most popular statesmen were found in the senate. Now you have to go to the house, or among the people for them. I believe in popularizing the senate. Send more men there who are in close touch with the people. Such a man is Gov. Foraker. He is one of the leaders of the party, and is especially popular with the young element, who would gladly see him in the United States Senate.

Sam D. Dare, secretary and treasurer The C. H. Schroeder Co.—I feel very kindly towards Gov. Foraker and am a warm admirer of his, but from a business standpoint, in my opinion, Sherman should be returned. He has represented us ably and faithfully, and Ohio is honored in having him in the senate. On all financial questions he is the soundest and safest man we can send to the senate. In my opinion it would be a grave mistake to set him aside for any one.

Samuel Currie, an ex-member of the board of equalization—Either would represent Ohio capably and faithfully in the United States Senate, but the commercial interests of the United States demand the re-election of John Sherman and the good judgment of our representatives, I believe, assures it.

George Stetter, of Grasser & Brand—I am most emphatically in favor of the re-election of John Sherman. It would be a serious mistake to attempt to replace him by anyone just now when the financial condition of the country demands the wisest heads in the highest places. Sherman should be his own successor.

O. A. Bostwick, of Bostwick, Braun & Co.—I am for John Sherman by all means. He ought to be re-elected. His position on all questions of finance is sound and he has represented the principles of the republican party intelligently and faithfully, and I believe a majority of the business men feel the same way. No man can more ably represent Ohio or more faithfully protect the business interests of the country than Sherman.

H. D. Fallis, Agent of the Minneapolis Flour Manufacturing Co.—While I admire Gov. Foraker and think he is a brilliant and forceful representation of young republicanism, it is my conservative opinion that the business and monetary interests of the country demand the re-election of the Hon. John Sherman.

F. C. Nicholas, of Nicholas & Buchanan—I think, while I have a great deal of respect and admiration for J. B. Foraker, that Mr. John Sherman would be the best man for Ohio to send to the senate.

Chas. A. Vordtriede, ex-county auditor—While I appreciate all that is said in favor of ex-Governor Foraker in the senatorial matter, still I think that at the present time the republican party of Ohio cannot afford to retire the Hon. John Sherman from the position he has filled with so much honor to his state, his party and himself, as it seems that another critical time is at hand, when the nation requires his wise and reliable council in the regulation of its financial affairs. Of course the venerable senator has not been able to please all in the disposition of the various public offices during his long term of service, but the disappointments and ill will so caused ought not in my estimation to stand in the way of continuing him in the position he has so ably filled. Any other person who would have held the same position for the same length of time would undoubtedly have to contest with as large an element of disappointed followers and friends.

Chas. Neuendorff, councilman—My choice for United States senator would be Chas. Foster, but if the selection is to be made from the candidates now prominently mentioned for the place, Foraker and Sherman, I would much prefer Sherman.

DONN PIATT'S FUNERAL.

West Liberty, O., Nov. 16.—Donn Piatt was buried Sunday at Mac-o-Chee. The ceremony was the service of the Catholic church. The pall bearers were Col. Frank S. Bond of New York, Gen. Henry M. Cist of Cincinnati, James W. Welsh of West Liberty, James A. Oder of Bellefontaine, Gov. James E. Campbell of Columbus, W. R. Fisher of West Liberty, John Murphy of Cincinnati, Judge Moses F. Wilson of Cincinnati, Judge W. R. Warner of Urbana and Charles G. Miller of Cleveland.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

Nyack, N. Y., Nov. 16.—Emil Smith, employed by John Cooner, one of the best known residents of Pearl River, Rockland county, while handling a revolver yesterday, accidently discharged it, shooting Mr. Cooper's son, Clarence in the leg. The wound is considered as probably fatal.

MENTIONED ON THE STREETS

That there is a lull in the real estate market.

That Toledo never had a better fire chief than Chris Well.

That only about six of the city's hundred churches have salaried choirs.

That gas consumers are pleased at the reduction in the price of illuminating gas.

That if Englewood is not the best known spot in Toledo it is not the fault of Mr. Horace Walbridge.

That street paving contractors are casting up accoonts to discover how they come out on the season's work.

That the friends of George Fields are really pushing him for the position of one of the penitentiary managers.

That the presentation of pianos as wedding gifts is becoming more popular. There will be no serious objection by Toledo's piano dealers, of which there are more than a few.

GERMANS ARE ON THE LIST

Forced to Leave Russia by the Czar's Order.

Alexander, In View of Possible War, Wants Nobody on His Territory Not in Sympathy With His Government.

Vienna, Nov. 16.—Accounts from the interior of Russia say that a general exodus is beginning of the Germans, who for a century past have taken a leading share of the development of the industrial welfare of the country.

There is reason to believe that the Russian government, anticipating war with Germany, sooner or later, has determined to rid itself of those who by their natural sympathies would be inclined to the German side.

The Germans are not harrassed in the same degree as the Jews, but they are made to feel certain disabilities that have been in abeyance, and menacing hints are thrown out that worse is coming.

The object seems to be to frighten rather than to force them away. The pastors everywhere are persecuted, and some of them have even been sent to Siberia on the charge of making proselytes, or of preaching against the Russian faith. Altogether the situation of Germans in Russia is fast becoming intolerable.

MOXIE ON HIS METAL.

Trade Competition on Canton Avenue And a Pull for "De Gang."

Canton avenue is always a scene of lively competition between those doing business on the street, the said business consisting principally of second-hand stores, saloons and gambling joints. Dave Marx, better known as "Moxie," who runs one of the big saloons, patronized by the colored element, is always in the thick of the fray, and his political row with Doc Smith is well known. Moxie now has another opponent in the person of Isidore Ries, who runs a saloon about a block away from Moxie's place. Moxie "has de gang wid him," and now Ries is engaged in an endeavor to draw them away to new idols and a lively muss is on, out of which the denizens of the avenue will reap a rich harvest in the shape of free drinks and bail at police court when they get into trouble.

Both were down at the police station the other day, and it was then that their enmity cropped out. Ries bailed out one of his men who had been hauled up and taunted Moxie. This roused the ire of the little fellow and he pulled out a big roll of bills to show that he could also do as he pleased. "That Ries thinks he can run me out," said Moxie, "but I will show him. I got five times as many fellows at my back as he has, and I've also got more money than he has; if we get pulled you will see which comes out best."

RAIDED THE GAMBLERS.

Lima, O., Nov. 16.—The police raided a gambling room on East Market street yesterday, capturing the whole outfit, together with the proprietor and 12 players. They were taken to the police station and all gave security for their appearance. The tables, chips, and other paraphernalia were loaded into a wagon and hauled away.

MARRIED SIXTY YEARS.

Norwalk, O., Nov. 16.—Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Gager, for many years prominent and well-known residents of this city, celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary Sunday. They were married at Binghamton, N. Y., November 15, 1831. Mr. Gager was 84 years old last March and Mrs. Gager was 76 the same month.

A FARMER IN LUCK.

Wapakoneta, O., Nov. 16.—Farmer Decatur Focht brought a drove of sheep here for shipment yesterday, and among them was found a "freak." It is a year old sheep with its head reversed. It walks sideways, faces to the rear and can only turn its head at right angles.

FULLFORD A WINNER.

ENTERTAINMENTS.

Master and Man at the People's All Week.

The Jefferson-Florence Engagement Wednesday Evening—Rhea Coming on Thanksgiving Day.

Classed among the best and most powerful English melodramas which have become popular in America, is Master and Man, the attraction at the People's this week. It was written by the famous playwrights, Simms and Pettitt, and possesses all the characteristics that have made every production of theirs a success. It is intensely interesting, superbly dramatic and highly sensational and contains numerous realistic scens for which special scenery was painted by Matt Morgan and Harley Merry. Among these may be mentioned the illuminated chapel, the farm scene, the village green and the Carlton iron works. This last scene, in which interest centers, deserves special mention. It is a stroke of realism never before attempted. It pictures, with absolute faithfulness, the interior of the iron mills, showing the tall chimneys from which great volumes of smoke escape and the huge blazing furnace from which hot flames shoot out.

The company, which is under the management of McConell and Mortimer, is an excellent one. Walter Edwards has scored a success as Jack Walton. Humpy Logan is intelligently interpreted by Dominick Murray, the distinguished character actor. Miss Marguerite Fealy sustains the role of Hester Thornberry. The play is enlivened with specialties, including songs by the Workingmen's quartette and the Twin City trio and athletic feats by the celebrated Martinetti brothers. E. H. Mack, Carl S. Aubyn, Charles Sanders, Mary Fish, Lotta Hollywood and little Maude Fealy are in the cast. Matinees Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

The Rivals.

The sale of seats for the engagement of the Jefferson & Florence company Wednesday night opened with a rush this morning and they are assured of a big house. The people in this splendid company are all well known and The Rivals will be a rare treat. The following is a comment from the New York World: The Rivals, as presented at the Star theater, would interest any English-speaking audience on earth. Jefferson as Bob Acres, W. J. Florence as Sir Lucius O'Trigger, and Mrs. John Drew as Mrs. Malaprop made a triangle of excellence not to be surpassed. Florence was unctuous and impressive as Sir Lucius. Mrs. John Drew's work was just as good as ever, and you can't improve upon perfection. Her Mrs. Malaprop is flawless. The exaggerated courtliness, the ostentatoins verbosity and the almost pitiful foolishness of this "weather-beaten old shedragon" will always be remembered.

Rhea.

Rhea will appear at Wheeler's Thanksgiving day in the historical play, entitled, La Czarine, in which the actress will interpret the wife of Peter the Great (Catherine I.) It is a page of Russian history never enacted on the stage of this country. By the way, it was the last play that the much lamented Rachel ever performed and now Rhea will present it most fittingly, as only an artist can do with all the original costumes, accessories and general paraphernalia necessary for a typical historical play. William Harris will play the character of Peter the Great. The Providence newspaper, where La Czarine had its initial performances a few weeks ago, pronounced it the best play that this great actress had ever presented in that city. In fact in every city visited thus far both press and public have indorsed it with the highest testimonials of their approval.

Mlle. Rhea will give three performances including Friday night.

Cadets' Cartridge Box.

The annual entertainment of the Toledo Cadets, appropriately called a Cartridge Box, and which will be filled with shells of good things, will occur this week, commencing to-morrow and continuing Wednesday and Thursday at Memorial hall. FISHING ON THE CREEK.

Poetical Romance of the Ottawa River —Fishermen Have Great Sport.

There was great fishing on the creek yesterday, and unlucky indeed was the fisherman who failed to catch a long string of pike. Notwithstanding the contrary east wind, the fishing was excellent, and those who did not mind a wetting had great sport.

The White Horse club caught more than enough for an exquisite fish supper and Charlie Buchanan, Link Morton, Billy Gerwin and a host of others had lengthy strings. Think of one man pulling out 52 handsome pike in a few hours. Mr. Morton caught 16 fine black bass in about an hour at a point opposite W. S. Thurstin's fruit farm, this side of Lang's.

The supply of fish this season is greater than at any time in ten years. Friday night the steamer Douglas brought in the biggest load of fish that ever came in from the lake. She was literally loaded to the gunwales, and the men say they did not half empty the net.

It was fun to see a kid of ten wrestling with a five-pounder from the top of Kramer's bridge yesterday. The youngster under the direction of people in the boats, played the big fellow until he was tired and then attempted to haul him up hand over hand on to the bridge. It was too much, and after a great deal of clever juggling the lad managed to land the fish on the rocks at the western pier and held it there until John Carr came to his rescue. People, however, were too busy hauling in their own fish to help a neighbor.

Fishing on the Creek.

To the Editor: The enclosed poetical romance of Ten Mile creek was picked up in a row boat at Kramer's. Major Leflet places the paternity of the piece at the doors of Billy Lanz or John Gunckel. "Annie Day" is Billy's nom de plume. Be that as it may, the subject is a well-known young merchant and its truthfulness will be guaranteed, by yours,

M. R. L. GREEN.

Woes may come and cares may cuff
This tender heart of mine,
But what of that while I've enough
To buy a rod and line.
They talk of pleasures that abound
Where the ducks play hide-and-seek,
Along the marsh, but none is found
Like fishing on the creek.

The thrill that runs from hand to heart
When the line moves off, and, oh,
The joy to foil the captive's art,
You huntsmen never know.
There are fish galore for me in store,
And something more, but speak
It low. There's something more
Than fish at Ten Mile Creek.

They ask me what I catch, and I
Will shake my head and say,
The wind was wrong, too dark the sky,
They didn't come my way.
Her hair is bright as beaten gold
And soft her rosy cheek,
The little girl whom I behold
Betimes upon the Creek.

A boat just big enough for two
I've got—and ain't it odd,
When we go fishing, faith 'tis true
She always holds the rod.
And I—well I—but never mind,
If you but care to seek
A nook above the bridge you'll find
Us fishing on the Creek.

WORKING WOMEN'S WORK.

Not very long ago I was one of the speakers at a meeting in Prince's hall, in Piccadilly, which was presided over by Lord Dunraven, who is well known in the United States. It was a meeting called for the purpose of trying to bring about some better conditions of labor for the poor working women in the East End of London. Many men made good speeches peers and members of the house of commons, and clergymen—there was even a bishop there—and Dissenting and Nonconforming ministers, who are usually endowed with a special gift of eloquence, which goes home to the heart of a popular audience. But the speech which interested me most was made by a working woman. It was not merely because she understood the practical question better than we did; it was not because, like the waitress whom Disraeli describes in his "Coningsby," through the mouth of his Sidonia, she was "mistress of her subject." Her expert knowledge, of course, counted for a great deal. But beyond this there was to my mind a remarkable capacity in her for taking at once a broad and a practical view of any subject; for recognizing the inevitable necessity of compromise; for accepting the conditions under which reform of any kind has to be made; for admitting limitations. Besides all this, there was a certain composure about her; a certain dignity of manner. She was neither obtrusive nor diffident. She seemed to say in effect: "You must take me as I am; I don't pretend to be a lady in the conventional sense of the word, and I don't pretend to be a good speaker, but I have something to say and I want to say it. I am not anxious to make a speech, but I have something to say to you which ought to be said." Now, I think that woman personified fairly the best aspect of the woman's movement in England. I think woman is coming forward because she has something to say which she feels ought to be said. This is the strictly legitimate influence of woman. It is not the influence of the petticoat. It is the intelligence of woman coming to the help of the intelligence of man. I am utterly unable to see how this comradeship in the management of affairs can either lower the dignity of man or unsex the nature of woman. I may say at once that I am an utter disbeliever in the possibility of unsexing woman, or man either. I am very fond of reading Ovid's "Metamorphoses;" but I disbelieve some of the stories.—North American Review for November.

The Effect of Feed on the Quality of Milk.

An experiment carried on at the Iowa Agricultural Station shows that:

1. Quality of milk so far as measured by its per centage of fat, was changed by feed to a much greater degree than was quantity. Two-thirds of the increase in average gross yield of butter fat was due to improved quality of the milk, and only one-third to increased milk flow.

2. Sugar meal produced .58 of a pound more butter fat per 100 pounds of milk than did corn and cob meal; this difference is 17 per cent. of the amount of fat in 100 pounds of milk produced by corn and cob meal.

4. As compared with corn and cob meal, sugar meal increased the ratio of fat to "solids not fat" in 100 pounds of milk, from 396 per 1,000 of "solids not fat" to 457 per 1,000 of "solids not fat," —an increase of over 15 per cent.

Bulletin No. 14, of the above station which contains the feed—milk, experiment, also gives the results of a calf feeding experiment which shows that:

1. A ration of skim milk and ground flax seed compares favorably with a new milk ration for young calves.

2. The larger gain came from the whole milk but a part of it was partly due to the individuality of the calves and good results and a thrifty growth were made on skim milk and ground flax seed.

3. The skim milk calves were interrupted less in their growth by weaning than the whole milk calves.

A saving in value of butter fat alone of $1.11 per month on each calf was affected by substituting the ground flax seed.

5. The cost of producing a pound of gain (estimating new milk at 87 1-2 cents per 100 pounds and skim milk at 15 cents per hundred pounds, grain 1 cent per pound, hay $5 per ton, and flaxseed meal 3 1-2 cents per pound) was 7.6 for the fresh milk ration and five cents for the skim milk ration.

A GRANITE STATUE.

The Philadelphia Inquirer says a Quaker city sculptor has just finished a work which is exciting wide comment in the art circles of the city. It is a life-sized statue of the daughter of a wealthy Pittsburg man, and it is carved from a solid block of granite. Granite is one of the most brittle of stones, and the delicate work required made it a more than usually difficult task. The work itself is bitter tale of human sorrow. Mr. Werner, for whom it was designed, recently lost his only daughter. He had reared her to budding womanhood, when she suddenly died. Almost heartbroken, he resolved to erect a monument to her honor. A shaft has already been placed over the grave, and on this the statue will be set.

AN ENTERTAINER A SUCCESS

Dr. Bigelow says he made no mistake in employing Mrs. Ernst as linguist musician and entertainer. It was an experiment, but like everything else the Dr. does it is a success, as anyone can see by spending a few hours at the Oriental Dental Parlors at 306 Summit street. Here Mrs. Ernst converses with Germans, French, Hungarians and others in their native tongue. There is not a language represented in Toledo that she can not speak. Even Latin is as easy for her as for the best educated priest. She not only speaks the different languages but writes them. There isn't a business in the city that would not be benefited by an interpreter like Mrs. Ernst, and we consider Dr. Bigelow very fortunate in securing her services. The accompanying wood cut is an excellent likeness of the lady, and a better educated lady would be hard to find. Good talent always comes high, but it is a rule with Dr. Bigelow to employ no other kind. The young men who assist him are all educated gentlemen, not only in common branches but also in the art of dentistry. None but thorough graduates are allowed to do work on the natural teeth in Dr. Bigelow's office. This fact is appreciated by the public, hence the doctor's large practice. Dr. Bigelow attends to extracting teeth in person, and this fact combined with the doctor's new painless method, draws people to his place for a hundred miles out of the city. The doctor has two chairs especially for extracting, and it is seldom they are unoccupied. In order to concentrate this particular part of dentistry the doctor extracts teeth Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays for half price.

MOST PEOPLE

Know only a comparatively few things thoroughly—all else is more or less uncertain.

Take your own case. What do you know about CARPETS, for instance? Are you competent to detect poor materials, or imperfect weaving, or unreliable colorings, or old-style patterns?

No.

Then will it not be wisdom on your part to make your purchases of CARPETS where all these points are taken care of in your interest, and where you are protected, not only from direct misrepresentation, but from the results of your own inexperience?

That seems plain enough.

Just two things we promise every customer. They are these:

That every salesman shall tell the whole truth about every piece of goods offered for sale; that anything which proves imperfect, through the appearance of any hidden defect subsequent to purchase, shall be made right.

The name of our firm stands behind these two guarantees.

Very likely you are thinking of purchasing one or more CARPETS shortly. If so, consider what we have said.

THE OLD TENOR.

A Monologue.

Did you say the singing was only fair?
Sir, if the chance was given me
To change from him on the stage up there
Straight to an angel's symphony—

Well, it might stagger my poor old brain,
But I think, on the whole, I back should come
To hear these worn sweet notes again,
And see you form that is cumbersome.

The why of it all? It fell, my friend,
A matter of fifteen years ago.
A certain man was nigh his end.
Lying wracked in a fever glow.

And a fine young star, in his flush of fame,
Stept to his bedside, took his hand,
And tried to waken life's spent flame
By singing songs of the lovely land.

God, how he sang! till the sick man turned
His face from the wall, and took deep breath
And said, as his eyes with new light yearned,
That life ran sweeter far than death.

If one might harken to strains like this;
And he swore he would live in death's despite,
Then sleep dropt down on him like a kiss,
And he woke with his blood all cool and right.

Perhaps you can fancy who was the man,
And who is the singer there on the stage,
And why I listen and sob, and can
But love his faults and his hints of age.

Some folks will say, when they pay their coin,
The perfectest singer is their choice,
Where youth and art and genius join;
But I like a man behind the voice.

SHOWER OF PERSIMMONS

Soon to Fall on Waiting Republican Office Seekers.

The President's Liking for Defeated Congressmen.

He Has Ignored the Workers and Given High Places to the People Who Were Defeated at the Polls for Re-Election.

Washington, Nov. 16.—It is understood that the president will not make any important appointments before the meeting of congress, although it would not be a surprise if the interstate commerce commissioner and judge of the court of claims were appointed on the eve of Thanksgiving.

The president is said to be desirous of doing something for which a few republicans may truly give thanks. A gentleman who called at the white house to-day to learn something about the numerous appointments the president must soon make, was informed that there was no immediate hurry to fill the vacancies now existing, and that the appointments would be made in due season.

There is a general feeling here that the president has made the selections for the offices to be filled. Several weeks ago he informed an applicant for interstate commerce commissioner that he had made up his mind as to whom he would appoint.

The appointments Mr. Harrison will make, for the senate to concur in, are secretary of war, third assistant secretary of state, circuit court judges, interstate commerce commissioner, ministers to China and Japan, governor of Oklahoma, civil service commissioner and judge of the court of claims.

The ex-members of congress who fell outside the breastworks in 1890, have been hot in the chase of the positions named, and as the president has a weakness for taking care of the members, perhaps they will fare well in the distribution of these official plums.

Mr. Harrison has been most liberal in bestowing favors on his friends who were voted to stay at home by the ents, and it is the ex-member who has been provided for that is shouting for the President's renomination.

A prominent republican from Indiana, who believes the salvation of his party depends on the nomination of Blaine, in speaking of the various appointments made by the President, said that unless the President took care to provide for the workers in the party and paid more attention to the suggestions of the Senators, he would not have half the following he expects to have in the convention.

"The President," he continued, "has not been disposed to follow the suggestions of the leaders of his party in the matter of appointments, and the consequence has been that the president has injured himself very much.

"In looking over the list of those who have been provided for," said the Indianian, "I find the following out of the many ex-members who are now drawing a good salary from Uncle Sam, and it will readily be seen why the ex-members are for Harrison:

"Conger, of Iowa, minister to Brazil.

"Morrow, of California, United States district judge.

"Hepburn, of Iowa, solicitor-general of the treasury department.

"Owen, of Indiana, superintendent of immigration.

"Weber, of New York, chief of immigration, New York city.

"Stockbridge, of Maryland, immigration commissioner, at Baltimore.

"Steele, of Indiana, governor of Oklahoma.

William Walter Phelps, New Jersey, minister to Germany.

Ryan of Kansas, minister to Mexico.

Guenther of Wisconsin, consul general, etc., to Mexico.

Carter of Montana, commissioner of the general land office.

Simonds of Connecticut, commissioner of the patent office.

Nichols of North Carolina, chief of division, treasury department.

Lacey of Michigan, controller of the currency.

Cutcheon of Michigan, ordnance board.

Lynch of Mississippi, fourth auditor, treasury department.

Parker of New York, assistant attorney general.

Tyner of Indiana, assistant attorney general.

Grosvenor of Ohio, world's fair.

Crounze of Nebraska, assistant secretary of the treasury.

Palmer of Michigan, minister to Spain.

Blair of New Hampshire, minister to China.

Saunders of Nebraska, Utah commissioner.

Bruce of Mississippi, recorder of deeds District of Columbia.

The commissionership of pensions was tendered to ex-Congressman Warner of Missouri before the appointment of Gen. Raum, and it is said that a place has been unofficially tendered to Mr. McComas of Maryland, a member of the last house, but he declined.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

Interesting News Gathered in Fayette.

The Attempt of the Republicans to Steal a Seat in the United States Senate—General Mention.

Fayette, O., Nov. 16.—(Special)—It seems to be the general sentiment among republicans in this corner of the universe that the next legislature of Ohio would make a great mistake in sending Foraker to the United States senate instead of Sherman. The "great consummation to be wished," however, is that somehow or other both of these pets would get there. Whatever may be the opinion of the greater and fairer-minded men in the republican party, there is a large per centage, in fact I believe the larger per centage, of the republican party believe that the senate would be justified in refusing Mr. Brice the seat to which he has been honestly and fairly elected. The past history of the republican party shows that it is ever for revolutionary acts to gain party ends. The history of the last congress is an instance of what party zeal can do, and the democrats have no full assurance but that extreme measures will be resorted to "for the good of the party." It may be the only means of healing the wounds of the Ohio patriots that this desperate act should be done. It may be considered that a policy of doing evil that good may follow will be considered necessary to strengthen and solidify the g. o. p. and make Ohio solid for 1892.

The Wabash railway has put in a switch and keeps a train and engine "full of men" to guard the place where the Lake Shore intend crossing its track west of here. This, I suppose, is to pay for the "devilment" the latter did to the former at Adrian a few years ago, when they were building the Wabash. So it goes—but the people pay it all finally. I understand it costs the Wabash folks $30 a day to keep up the guard. The Lake Shore will probably let them keep it up all winter.

BOY BANDITS IN NEW YORK

Four Youthful Burglars Behind the Bars.

They Confessed Their Guilt When Caught.

Cave Dwellers of the Wild West and Train Robbers on the Prairie in Danger of Losing Their Laurels.

New York, Nov. 16.—(Special)—A number of young burglars who have been operating in Long Island City recently, have been captured by the local police. Charles Blackham, 11 years old, who was recently charged with horsestealing, but was not prosecuted on account of his youth, was arrested a few days ago on complaint of his mother, who lives in Dutch Kills.

Blackham confessed to the police that he and three other boys—Thomas Clark of Maspeth, 17 years old; Charles Desmond, of Academy street, Long Island City, 18 years old, and Fred Woerner, 15 years old, who has no known residence—had banded together to rob stores and houses.

He said they had robbed the stores of Louis Hahn, on Academy street; Joseph McLaughlin, in Blissville, and Peter Nolan, in Jackson avenue.

From Hahn's store, which they entered by forcing the transom over the main entrance, the young burglars carried off a keg and a half of powder, some revolvers, cigars, pipes and other articles. The booty secured at the other places which were burglarized consisted chiefly of whisky and cigars.

Some of the stolen property was found by the police in a room at No. 730 Jackson avenue, used as a meeting room by the Keystone Pleasure club, a local social organization.

Young Blackham was employed as a janitor by the club. It appears that he invited his three companions to name the room a night rendezvous, where they would meet after the members of the club had gone away, and make plans for robbery. The police found Desmond, Clark and Woerner in the room.

The police searched the old Bragan farm, at Sunnyside, where, it was said, the boy burglars had utilized an old well as a hiding place for their booty. The well, which has not been used for a long time, was searched, but none of the stolen property was found.

Near the top of the well a small aperture was discovered which was found upon further examination to lead to a small cave five feet square which had been excavated from the surface. A roof was constructed by placing planks across it and covering them with 18 inches of earth. The cave had evidently been used for some purpose and the police are of the opinion that it was used as a place of meeting. People living near say they have often seen Blackman and Desmond in the vicinity.

The three boys—Desmond, Clark and Woerner—were preparing to sleep on the floor of the Keystone club room when the police arrested them. Desmond had one of the pistols stolen from Hahn's store in his possession, and Woerner was wearing a pair of shoes which had been taken from a shoe store on Borden avenue. The boys admitted that they robbed Hahn's store, but denied any knowledge of the other robberies. The four prisoners were taken before Justice Kavanagh and committed for examination.

Desmond is a nephew of Alderman John Desmond and bears a bad reputation. Blackman's parents are respectable, hard working people. He has, however, been very troublesome. With three other boys he stole several horses from pasture in Dutch Kills, which were sold for $3 and $5 each in Greenpoint. The horses were all recovered and the owners of the animals did not prosecute the juvenile thieves. Woerner is a homeless outcast, of whom little is known, and Clark is said to have been turned out of his home by his father because of his bad conduct.

A COMMON SENSE REMEDY.

In the matter of curatives what you want is something that will do its work while you continue to do yours—a remedy that will give you no inconvenience nor interfere with your business. Such a remedy is Allcock's Porous Plasters. These plasters are not an experiment; they have been in use for over thirty years, and their value has been attested by the highest medical authorities, as well as by testimonials from those who have used them. They require no change of diet, and are not affected by wet or cold. Their action does not interfere with labor or business; you can toil and yet be cured while hard at work. They are so pure that the youngest, the oldest, the most delicate person of either sex can use them with great benefit.

Beware of imitations, and do not be deceived by misrepresentation. Ask for Allcock's, and let no solicitation or explanation induce you to accept a substitute.

CHARITY.

"Can you give me two fives for a ten?" asked a Philadelphia millionaire to whom a charity committee had applied for a contribution. "Certainly, sir," eagerly replied the spokesman, handing out two $5 bills. "What's this?" inquired the money king. "Why, two fives for a ten! Isn't that what you said?" "Possibly I did—possibly I did," he said, reflectively, "but I meant 10 cents."—Texas Siftings.

ITS EXCELLENT QUALITIES

Commend to public approval the California liquid fruit remedy Syrup of Figs. It is pleasing to the eye and to the taste, and by gently acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels, it cleanses the system effectually, thereby promoting the health and comfort of all who use it.

ROCKED IN THE CRADLE OF THE DEEP

Sounds nice, don't it? But O, how fast and furious are the rockings in rough weather! The intestinal warfare begotten in your vitals by the sea's commotion beggars description. What's the proper caper under these circumstances? Take Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Nothing comparable to it for remedying sea sickness or the kindred nausea from which many delicate land travelers suffer. Dyspepsia, cramps, constipation and biliousness also are invariably and promptly remedied by the Bitters. Exposure in rough weather is often productive of hurtful consequences, which may, however, be averted by the timely use of the Bitters, which diffuses an agreeable warmth through the system, and promotes an active circulation of the blood in the extremities when benumbed and chilled. Malaria, kidney trouble, rheumatism and debility are remedied by the Bitters.

SUFFERERS.

Two sorts of men are sufferers on this earth;
Toward virtue, or toward vice, each runs to goal.
Sin laughs, but anguish mocks and dooms its mirth.
For evil breeds more pain to damn the soul
Than would suffice to win it heaven's best worth.

MR. SWANN'S TRAGEDY.

"Unless," said Mr. Pitt to Mr. Fox, "unless Providence puts something good in our way, we may chuck up the sponge. We've had nothing but old stagers to deal with for the last six months, and dealing with them is poor business. Why, we haven't made a decent haul for a year past."

"That's true, Aaron," answered Mr. Fox in a sad voice. "Things are going to the devil—that's my opinion. When we started in business, pigeons were as common as gooseberries; now they're the rarest beings possible, and when one does turn up, there is such a race for him among the agents that the game's spoiled before it's actually properly on the wing."

"Ay, ay, the profession is loosing all sense of honor. It used to be an honorable understanding among us that the firm that raised the game should have him, but now everybody is for himself, and nobody cares a curse for anybody. Well, well, all we can do is to trust in Providence."

Mr. Pitt's pious reliance was not without justification. He had scarcely expressed it when a knock sounded at the door, and the office boy announced that Mr. Swann wanted to see the partners about the production of a play which he had just written. A glance of delight passed between Mr. Pitt and Mr. Fox as the young author was shown into their den.

Mr. Swann was a well dressed, refined looking young fellow of about four-and-twenty. He was very modest and shy in his manner, and evidently quite unaccustomed to transact business. The experienced eyes of Messrs. Pitt and Fox saw at once that he would prove an easy and a profitable prey.

"Good morning, sir," said Mr. Pitt in a businesslike way. "I understand you desire us to look over a play of yours with a view of securing its production on the stage."

"Yes, if you please," answered Mr. Swann, blushing a little.

"Very well, Mr.—let's see—Mr. Swann," said Mr. Pitt. "Now, the usual and best course in such cases is to leave the play with us for our opinion upon it. We can then read it carefully, and suggest such alterations as our long experience in theatrical matters dictates."

"Precisely," replied Mr. Swann eagerly. "That's just what I want—the opinion of a practical man. All the fellows at Oxford thought it a magnificent work, but I don't put much confidence in their opinions because, of course, they judged it from a literary point of view merely. You would look at it as a practical man."

"Exactly, Mr. Swann, exactly. Well, you know it takes time to read a play, and we can't afford to give our time for nothing I presume you're prepared to pay the usual fee."

"Oh, certainly," replied Mr. Swann. "May I ask what it is?"

"Twenty guineas."

"I think I have that amount with me. You don't mind taking notes?"

"Certainly not; certainly not. Thank you—that's quite correct. To make all things regular, we'll give you a receipt. Mr. Fox, draw out one in the usual form. Now, Mr. Swann, just leave the play with us. Our united opinion will be ready in a few days."

"I trust you'll let me have it as soon as possible. I want to have the play produced without delay."

"Of course, Mr. Swann, of course. But you see we have a great deal in hand to attend to, and, besides, we always like to consider and reconsider our opinion before finally delivering it to the author. Here's the receipt. Good-day, sir. You had, perhaps, better call again this day week. Good-day."

As the office door closed behind Mr. Swann, Mr. Pitt's left eye closed, too. Simultaneously Mr. Pitt's index finger went to the side of his nose, while a broad smile overspread the rubicund features of Mr. Fox.

"Luck at last, thank heaven!" said Mr. Pitt.

"Right you are," responded Mr. Fox. "And now let us go out and have a bottle of champaign to celebrate the occasion."

The play was thrown into the safe, and the two agents adjourned to a neighboring restaurant, where they spent the rest of the afternoon, and several of Mr. Swann's guineas.

A week later Mr. Swann called at the office of Messrs. Pitt & Fox. Meantime his play had reposed peacefully in the safe where it had been thrown after the previous interview.

Mr. Fox received him.

"Ah, Mr. Swann," he said, "I'm sorry Mr. Pitt is not in. He has been expecting you all day, but unfortunately Mr. Tearem—you know Mr. Tearem, the great tragedian?—Mr. Tearem sent for him to consult him about the new play he's bringing out at the Rageum, and, of course, he had to go. I can't say when he'll be back, but he told me to ask you to call again this day week."

Mr. Swann looked disappointed.

"Has he looked at my work yet" he asked.

"Oh! yes; and let me tell you in confidence, Mr. Swann he thinks a lot of it," said Mr. Fox, confidentially. "He thinks it should be produced at once."

"Does he?" replied Mr. Swann, vainly trying to conceal his delight. "I hope he'll succeed in getting it brought out for me."

"Oh, he can do that, of course. You have no idea the influence Mr. Pitt has in theatrical circles. His opinion is nearly conclusive with every manager and actor from Mr. Tearem down."

"I'm sure it is," said Mr. Swann. "And I'm delighted that he thinks so well of my play, for I'm confident it points to its ultimate success."

"That may be, Mr. Swann. But remember, a man in Mr. Pitt's position does not take trouble for nothing. Before he uses his influence to get your play produced at a matinee you'll have to stump up."

Mr. Swann hesitated.

"I am not very rich, Mr. Fox," he said. "My father had a great misfortune in money matters last year, and he died of a broken heart, leaving very little behind him. Still I have a little money and I'm willing to pay anything reasonable to get the play put on the stage if Mr. Pitt really thinks it is likely to succeed."

"My dear Mr. Swann, he has no doubt about it. I assure you that you could not make a better investment of your money than in getting it brought out."

"How much do you think he would want?" asked Mr. Swann nervously.

"Well, to cover preliminary trouble and expenses—you know in these matters there is always a lot of preliminary trouble and expenses—well to cover them his usual terms are 200 guineas."

"Two hundred guineas!" repeated Mr. Swann, turning color slightly. "Isn't that a big fee? I'm afraid—I—I should find difficulty in raising so much at once."

"That's his usual fee, Mr. Swann, but yours isn't a usual case. As I told you, he thinks a lot of your play, and when that's the case he's ready to take half his usual fee in hand, and look to the profits of the piece when produced for the other half. You could advance a hundred at once, I take it?"

"Yes, I think I could," replied Mr. Swann, hesitatingly, "but it will swallow up all the ready money I have. I suppose Mr. Pitt couldn't be induced to look for the whole fee to the profits."

"He wouldn't think of it, Mr. Swann," replied Mr. Fox, decisively, "and I'll tell you why. If he did that in your case, everybody else would want him to do the same. But for that he would have no hesitation. This very morning, just before he left for the Rageum, he said to me: 'If that play's not a gold mine, call me a blooming fool.'"

Mr. Swann reflected for a moment.

"Mr. Pitt wouldn't buy my play. I suppose?" he then asked.

"Mr. Pitt never buys plays," said Mr. Fox a little sternly.

Mr. Swann again reflected.

After watching him carefully for a few seconds, Mr. Fox thought it time to bring matters to an issue, so he remarked, in an off-hand way: "Well, Mr. Swann, what is your decision? Will you give this fee or not? I assure you it will be worth your while. A hundred guineas in hand and a charge on the play of a hundred more—those I call deuced good terms, and it's few authors—unknown authors—that get them from Mr. Pitt."

"Yes, I think I will," replied Mr. Swann, slowly.

"Very well, here's the charging form. Read it—'In consideration of Mr. Aaron Pitt undertaking to use his best exertions to have my play of the 'Sacred Flame' produced, I promise to pay him within three days 100 guineas, and I hereby charge the same play with a lien in his favor for a further hundred guineas.' Sign it there. Thank you. Now remember that before Mr. Pitt takes a step in the matter he must have the hundred guineas in hand."

"Very well," answered Mr. Swann, a little dolefully.

When the young playwright left the office, Mr. Fox sprang up from his seat.

"Joe!" he cried.

"Yes, sir," answered the office boy.

"I'm off to Litano's. Shan't be back to-day."

He immediately rushed off to Litano's. There Mr. Pitt had been seated during the interview, drinking champagne with a fourth-class burlesque actress. When his partner arrived, he was a little advanced in liquor.

"Well," he called out to Mr. Fox, did the greenhorn take the hook?"

"Look for yourself," answered Mr. Fox, as he flung down the paper poor Swann had signed on the table.

"Sol, you're a genius!" cried Mr. Pitt, when he had read it. "Hi, waiter, another bottle of Berlinger!"

A week later, Mr. Swann—having meanwhile, by realizing several of his poor little investments, raised a hundred guineas, and sent them on to Mr. Pitt—called again at the office. It was Mr. Pitt who this time received him.

After the usual preliminaries, the two came to business.

"Mr. Swann," said Mr. Pitt, pulling the manuscript play out of a pile of loose papers lying in the safe—it had been there undisturbed since Mr. Swann's first visit—"this play, I may tell you candidly, is, in my opinion, nothing short of a work of genius, and I may add that I never yet found my opinion turn out wrong. As a rule, if I recommend a work, theatrical managers take it without hesitation. Unfortunately—most unfortunately—in this case that is not so. I can't tell why it is—it must be, I think, that the play is too original in conception, theatrical managers are very hidebound in their notions—but whatever the reason may be, I have, after great exertions, failed utterly to get any one to accept the risk of bringing it out at his own expense."

Mr. Swann drew a long breath.

"I suppose, then," he said slowly, "I may assume that there's no hope?"

"None, none whatever," said Mr. Pitt. "Unless—unless you're disposed to risk a little more money on it."

"I—I don't quite understand you?" faltered Mr. Swann.

"I mean unless you should be disposed to bring it out at your own expense."

"How much would that cost?"

"Well, roughly, about £200."

"That's just about all I have in the world," said Mr. Swann, with a weak smile.

"Well, of course, one can never be sure of success until the piece has succeeded," said Mr. Pitt, in a very judicial way, "but, at the same time, I'm morally certain that this piece, if properly put on the stage, would take the town."

"Yes," murmured Mr. Swann, his voice trembling and his lips parched. "Yes, but the risk—is—is—awful! What if it didn't succeed?"

"But it must, my dear sir; it must. Look here, now, just to show you my confidence in it, I'll go halves with you in the risks."

"You will?" exclaimed Mr. Swann, in pleased surprise.

"Yes, I will. If I didn't feel pretty sure of success, you may swear I wouldn't put my money in it. But, if you'll advance a hundred to me, I'll pay out of my own pocket every further shilling necessary to produce it, and to produce it well."

Mr. Swann paused and thought.

"I have already paid you 120 guineas," he said.

"Yes, and now you're not going to spoil the ship for a penn'orth of tar, are you?"

"I'll think the matter over," said Mr. Swann.

"Very well, very well," answered Mr. Pitt, in an injured tone. "All I can say is that this is the first time I ever had such an offer as that sneezed at."

"Oh, Mr. Pitt! I don't reject it. I only want to think it over. You know £100 mayn't be much to you, but it's a great deal—a great deal—to me."

"Well, well! think it over," said Mr. Pitt, magnanimously. "I'll not withdraw it for—let us see—a week. If you haven't by that time made up your mind to accept it, it's off."

Mr. Pitt knew he had the young playwright's £100 safe enough, and he was not mistaken. Before the week was up, Mr. Swann arrived with it, and the agreement was duly signed.

"I hope you'll lose no time in getting it on the stage," said Mr. Swann, after he had handed over his coin and signed the agreement.

"Oh, there's no hurry about that, Mr. Swann," replied Mr. Pitt, coolly.

Mr. Swann stared at him for a moment.

"But I understood you to say that you would get it out without delay?" he then said.

"That, of course, meant without unreasonable delay," answered Mr. Pitt. "As I'm going shares in this business, Mr. Swann, I must consult my own interests as well as yours. I have undertaken to produce this piece, and I'll do it; but I'll do it when I think there's the best chance of success. I'm not going to produce it hurriedly, or with a scratch company, or in the silly season just because you want it. No, Mr. Swann, you must now leave the whole matter in my hands. Good morning, sir; it will all come right in the end. Good morning."

With a dazed brain and a throbbing heart, Mr. Swain left the office. The change in the agent's manner toward him startled and alarmed him. Was it possible that the man was a rogue? Was it possible that now that he had extracted practically all his money out of him he was going to throw him and his play over? Hitherto not a suspicion of sharp practice—not a doubt of the agent's absolute honesty had ever entered Mr. Swann's innocent mind. The fears and questions which now rushed in upon it dazed and frightened him.

Three months passed. During these three months Mr. Swann called every week at the office of Messrs. Pitt & Fox. Every time he was met by one of two answers, either that Mr. Pitt was not in, or that Mr. Pitt was engaged. At last he could bear it no longer. He called again. The office boy informed him that Mr. Pitt was engaged.

"Very well," answered Mr. Swann, "I'll wait here till he can see me, though it be 48 hours." And he sat down.

Within 10 minutes he was shown into Mr. Pitt's room.

"Well? What do you want?" asked that gentleman.

"Want? I want to know how my play is getting on," answered Mr. Swann, hotly. "When is the matinee to come off?"

"It is to come off when I think proper," was Mr. Pitt's response.

"That won't do for me," said Mr. Swann. "I want a definite answer."

"Well, you won't get it. Do you remember what you agreed to? Look here, I am to produce when and at what theatre I think most suitable and most likely to ensure its success'—those are the words. It's all a question for me, and for me alone, when it shall be produced, and I tell you if you are not more civil it will be a long time."

"Give me back my play!" demanded Mr. Swann, with anger.

"Your play—yours, indeed! Do you know, sir, that I have a lien on it for a hundred guineas? Give me the hundred guineas and I'll give you your play."

"Sir, you're a swindler—a rank—" gasped Mr. Swann.

"Get out of the room, sir. Here, Joe, Mr. Fox, kick this fellow down stairs."

Poor Mr. Swann raged for a moment, but he saw it was no use. Mr. Fox and the office boy caught him by the shoulders and he was soon overpowered.

"I'll go," he said in a husky voice.

"Yes, go, and don't come back till you have learned better manners," retorted Mr. Pitt.

Mr. Swann left the office looking a worn-out man, though he had not seen yet 25 summers.

When he had gone Pitt turned to his partner.

"I was a fool," he said, "not to have given the idiot his play back when he asked for it. He threatens to become troublesome. If he takes us into court it will be nasty."

"I'll tell you what to do," suggested Mr. Fox. "Tearem, I hear, is looking out for a play. Just send it to him. Probably we shall never hear of it again; but if I drop Swann a line saying it's in Tearem's hands, that may keep him quiet for a time."

"Not a bad idea, Sol. Try it."

Next morning, as Mr. Swann came down to breakfast, Mr. Fox's letter was handed to him. He glanced at its contents, and then, with a feeling of bitter scorn, he tore it into atoms. All his faith in the agents and in their promises was gone forever.

After partaking scantily of his breakfast, he went out to wander aimlessly through the crowded streets. Miserable beyond expression, hopeless, lost to everything around him, he walked slowly along. Suddenly he felt a hand placed on his shoulder. He turned round hurriedly.

"How are you, Tom?" said a cherry voice.

It was Jack Dawson, an old school chum of Mr. Swann's, whom he had lost sight of for many a day.

Following the custom of their age and country, the two young men adjourned to the nearest bar to have a chat. There Jack Dawson told of his adventures since he left school, which shortly amounted to this, that, after trying many callings, he had at last settled down to press work; his specialty, as he called it, being dramatic criticism. Then Mr. Swann related his fortunes and misfortunes. The latter greatly interested Jack Dawson, most especially those which arose out of his dealings with Messrs. Pitt & Fox.

"I know the scoundrels," Jack said, "and I think I can help you with them. Let me see now. They have sent your play to Tearem. Ah, yes, I think I have it. Come along, old fellow."

When Messrs. Pitt & Fox sent Mr. Swann's play to Mr. Tearem, as has been explained, they firmly believed that that was the last that any one would hear of it. Their amazement, then, can be imagined, when, about a fortnight later, who should walk into their office but Mr. Tearem himself for the purpose of making inquiries as to that very play and its author.

"Yes," he said, "I want to see the author. It's a good work—a work of genius, I should say—crude, no doubt, but showing immense power. I want to settle terms with its author. Who is he? Where can I see him?"

"Well, sir," answered the startled Mr. Pitt, "the fact is we can't disclose his name. He doesn't want to be known. But we shall be happy to consult him and settle terms without an hour's delay."

"Thank you—many thanks. Tell him I'll deal liberally with him. Let me know what he says. Good morning." And the great actor hurried off.

"Sol," said Mr. Pitt, when he and his partner had recovered sufficiently from their surprise to speak, "if we don't get Swann to assign us that play before he hears of his luck, we're born fools."

Mr. Swann had learned by experience. He knew the sort of gentlemen Messrs. Pitt & Fox were, and, when they approached him on the matter, he told them bluntly that they must have some good reason for wanting to buy his play, and that he was resolved not to part with it except for a good price. It was in vain that they explained to him that it was simply consideration for him that made them think of purchasing; he laughed in their faces. At last they had to consent to his terms, which were 500 guineas in money down. With difficulty they scraped it together, and the play was theirs.

Then they wrote to Mr. Tearem, telling him that the author's terms were a thousand pounds down, and the usual royalty on receipts. The next day they received the following letter from the great actor:

Gentlemen—I'm afraid you misunderstood me. I never thought of producing or purchasing the play. I merely wanted to see the author and arrange terms with him as writing, under my supervision, another play on a subject I have long had in my mind. I wished to do this as I thought, and think still, that The Sacred Flame shows great promise, though it is very crude and amateurish. Thanks to my friend, Mr. Dawson, I have been able to carry out my intentions. He was kind enough to introduce Mr. Swann to me, and that gentleman is now engaged, with every prospect of success, on the subject I suggested. Yours ever,

T. TEAREM.

P. S.—I return herewith MS. of The Sacred Flame.

"Great Scott!" cried Mr. Pitt, as he handed the letter to Mr. Fox, "we have been done, clean spoofed, in fact, and by that greenhorn, too!"—London Truth.

38 & 40 W. Gay St., one block N. of State House, Columbus, O. Incorporated, 1886. Capital, $300,000.
DRS. FRANCE AND OTTMAN, of New York, the well known and successful Specialists in Chronic Diseases and Diseases of the Eye and Ear, on account of their large practice in Ohio, have established the FRANCE MEDICAL INSTITUTE, where all forms of Chronic, Nervous and Private Diseases will be successfully treated on the most Scientific principles. They are ably assisted by a full corps of eminent Physicians and Surgeons, each one being a well known specialist in his profession
CANCER positively cured without pain or use of the knife, by a new method.
IMPORTANT TO LADIES.—DR. FRANCE, after years of experience, has discovered the greatest cure known for all diseases peculiar to the sex. Female diseases positively cured by the new remedy, OLIVE BLOSSOM. The cure is effected by home treatment. Entirely harmless and easily applied. Consultation Free and Strictly Confidential. Correspondence promptly answered.
YOUNG MEN—Who have become victims of solitary sin, that dreadful and destructive habit, which annually sweeps to an untimely grave thousands of young men of exalted talent and brilliant intellect, may call with confidence.
DRS. FRANCE AND OTTMAN, after years of experience, have discovered the greatest cure known for weakness in the back and limbs, involuntary discharges, impotency, general debility, nervousness, lassitude, confusion of ideas, palpitation of the heart, timidity, trembling, dimness of sight, or giddiness, diseases of the head, throat, nose, or skin, affections of the liver, lungs, stomach, or bowels—those terrible disorders arising from the solitary vice of youth—and secret practices, blighting their most radiant hopes or anticipations, rendering marriage impossible. Take one candid thought before it is too late. A week or month may place your case beyond the reach of hope. Our method of treatment will speedily and permanently cure the most obstinate case, and absolutely restore perfect manhood.
TO MIDDLE-AGED MEN.—There are many from the age of 30 to 60 who are troubled with frequent evacuations of the bladder, often accompanied by a slight burning or smarting sensation, weakening the system in a manner the patient cannot account for. On examination of the urinary deposits, a ropy sediment will be found, or the color will be a thin or milkish hue. There are many men who die of this difficulty, ignorant of the cause, which is a second stage of seminal weakness. We will guarantee a perfect cure in all such cases, and a healthy restoration of the genito-urinary organs.
DISEASES OF WOMEN.—We have a special department, thoroughly organized, and devoted exclusively to the treatment of diseases of women. Every case consulting our specialists, whether by letter or in person, is given the most careful and considerate attention. Important cases (and we get few which have not baffled the skill of all the home physicians) have the benefit of a full council of skilled specialists. In treatment of diseases peculiar to females, our success has been marked, over two-thirds of our patients being ladies, old, young, married, single, rich and poor. Our method is entirely free from objectionable features of the general practitioner, namely, "Local treatment." We seldom find it necessary. We prepare remedies, constitutional and local, as the case demands, and instruct ladies how to treat themselves.
MARRIAGE.—Married persons, or young men contemplating marriage, aware of physical weakness, loss of procreative powers, impotency, or any other disqualification, speedily restored.
PRIVATE DISEASES.—Blood Poison, Venereal Taint, Gleet, Stricture, Seminal Emissions, Loss of Sexual Power, Weakness of Sexual Organs, Want of Desire in Male or Female, whether from imprudent habits of youth or sexual habits of mature years, or any cause that debilitates the sexual functions, speedily and permanently cured. Consultation free and strictly confidential. Absolute cures guaranteed. Medicines sent free from observation to all parts of the United States.
EPILEPSY, OR FITS.—Positively cured by a new and never-failing method. Testimonials furnished.

Persons ruined in health by unlearned pretenders, who keep trifling with them month after month, giving poisonous mixtures and injurious compounds, should apply immediately. Delays are dangerous.
WONDERFUL CURES No experiments or failures. Parties treated by mail or express, but where possible, personal consultation is preferred. Curable cases guaranteed. No risks incurred.

Wheat Quotations for the Day—Price Current for Produce and Other Articles

London wheat market rather easier. Corn steady. Country markets strong. French firm. Weather wet. Liverpool wheat dull and 1-2d lower. Corn firm.

The receipts of wheat at seven principal western points to-day are 1,450,795 bu., compared with 793,912 bu. on the same day last year.

Wheat Stocks.—Toledo increased 53,627 bu; New York decreased 485,516 bu.

Bradstreet's Report of Exports.

For 20 weeks exports of wheat and flour from United States ports reported equal nearly 82,000,000 bu, against 37,298,000 bu from United States and Canada in 20 weeks of 1890-91, and as compared with 39,134,000 bu in 1889, 42,448,000 bu in 1888, and 61,350,000 bu in 1887.

Business failures in the United States and Canada for the week were 268, against 238 the previous week, and 200 for the corresponding week in 1890.

October's gross railroad earnings are among the best this year, the gain being slightly less than that of September over the like month in 1890. Gross earnings of 140 roads for October aggregated $56,712,549 on a total of 97,764,000 miles, a gain of 8.7 per cent. in earnings and 1.8 per cent. in mileage over last year. This follows a gain of 4.1 per cent. in October, 1890, over 1889. For 10 months the earnings' aggregate is $454,421,751, a gain over 10 months of last year of 5.8 per cent., following a gain in 10 months of 1890 over 1889 of 9.1 per cent.

The "Pester Lloyd" says that according to official reports the harvest in Roumania has not been so good as was at first supposed. With regard to maize, which is the principal cereal product of Roumania, the crop, owing to the protracted drought in the spring, has been so poor that certain districts, especially in the neighborhood of the Danube, will be compelled to import.—Philadelphia Price Current.

The value of exports of provisions and dairy products for October was $8,910,862. In 1890, $11,340,717.

The Minneapolis Market Record reports that now that plowing has been checked by frozen ground, the deliveries of wheat will likely be increased.

The Liverpool Corn Trade News sets the board of trade right on the Russian oat crop, and reports it at 421,000,000 bushels.

The receipts of wheat to-day at seven principal western points are 824,922 bu in excess of the corresponding Monday in 1890.

The export clearances Saturday from four Atlantic ports were 797,086 bu of wheat and flour to an aggregate of 860,000 bu. Exports of corn 153,285 bu and oats 178,662 bu.

English markets as reported herein are dull and lower for wheat and firm for corn.

Russian Exports.

Once more the all important topic of Russian wheat exports comes to the front. It was stated on Saturday to have been settled that wheat exports were interdicted, but there is no confirmation of the report, and we suppose another fake has been practiced upon the trade.

There is really no new feature in the deal to-day unless the visible supply table which is not yet at hand as we write, may furnish some surprises. Foreign markets are dull and lower—the receipts continue in good volume, indeed the aggregate at the seven points given are 140,000 bu. in excess of the previous Monday. The export movement is satisfactory, and New York shows a large movement to-day in wheat, corn and oats.

IT IS AN OLD STORY.

General Misapprehension As To That Shortage

Reported On by the Special Finance Committee.

Turner's Shortage Occurred Years Ago—All His Present Charges Have Been Made Before and Refuted.

The report of the special finance committee of the Knights of Labor, made here last week, that Frederick Turner, ex-treasurer of the order, was $31,000 short, so far as the books of the order authorizing expenditure could be found by the committee to show, and $14,000 short according to his own vouchers left in the general office, is being widely misunderstood. A great many of our exchanges are speaking of a present shortage. The fact is, all the financial affairs of the order have been administered to the satisfaction of the order under Secretary-Treasurer Hayes, nor is there any question as to the administration of his predecessor in the office of secretary, Litchman of Massashusetts. But in the office of treasurer, which previous to the Indianapolis session was divided from that of secretary, Turner being treasurer, threre was maladministration during Turner's term, and discovered after his retirement from office.

The report of the committee, to recapitulate, is: That they went to headquarters; served notice to Turner to appear before them, which he refused to do; requested him to appoint a place and time when he would meet them and show them any papers and documents he might have bearing on the case, which he refused to do; that they then examined the books, vouchers, etc., as found in the office, with the result as reported, and as given to the public through the press.

Naturally Mr. Turner came back through the press, but defends himself only by attacking those who were his fellow-officers. For instance, he says in an eastern paper, that Secretary-Treasurer Hayes has furnished his house with money belonging to the order since he has held these offices.

A Bee asked Mr. Hayes what he had to say to this, and the reply was:

"I have never had a house to furnish, not even a rented one, since I have been in office. I have never had any time to live anywhere. I have a wife, but no other family, and we board in Philadelphia. I haven't a stick of furniture of any kind."

This sweeping denial would seem to settle at least one counter charge made by Mr. Turner.

Representative Cavanaugh, of Cincinnati, said to a Bee:

"Judging from the reports and criticisms appearing in the press the opinion seems to prevail that the shortage reported is of recent occurrence. This is not the case, as the investigation referred only to Mr. Turner's administration of our finances, and he has not even been a member of the organization since the general assembly met in Indianapolis three years ago. At that session I was chairman of the finance committee, and in our report called attention to the very unbusinesslike methods of Turner's office, saying that no business institution, and not even a well conducted local assembly of our organization, would tolerate such a loose way of conducting business as Mr. Turner's system permitted."

George Murray, who has attended almost every general convention for 10 years, said: "There is no truth whatever in the statements Turner is now making, in my opinion, and for this reason: The matters about which he is now talking all occurred in 1886, were all known to him then, as he was both treasurer of the general order and a member of its executive board. What was done then met with his hearty approval then, and was concurred in them by him. Believing him to have been honest then, I believe that there was nothing dishonest done then. I believe him to be dishonest now, because he is trying to tear down men who are high in the order, whom we trust and know why we trust, and because I see him pursuing this dishonest course now I look upon any statement he may now make as a dishonest one."

Mr. Powderly said to a Bee: "Mr. Turner goes into the newspapers to say he is about to tell the public things heretofore known only to him and kept secret, and then he goes on to rehash a lot of old stories that he told to the representatives at Indianapolis, in and out of the convention, that were there and then refuted, that he has told every one who would listen to him ever since, that never had any foundation in fact, and have been refuted over and over again. All my acts as an officer of the Knights of Labor are open to inspection, and I court it. If Turner has made new charges against me, I do not know what they are, and cannot deny them without knowing. But I am ready to meet them here or anywhere else. I recognize and appreciate the fact that I have the full confidence of the men and women in the order, and for their sake I am ready to bear the burdens that are laid upon me as, and because, I am their chief officer.

"But my integrity as a man, if it be questioned in the press will be defended in the press. I must know the charges first. Meantime, Mr. Turner should defend himself (if he can) and not waste time attacking me or the faithful officers who have stood by me in my work for this order.

"If the newspapers which are now publishing Mr. Turner's statement, so far as I have seen it published, will turn to their own files and look back over the last three or four years, they will find that these things have been said and denied over and over again."

The delegates generally say, as one of them said to a Bee, "The only new thing about our finances reported at this session was the statement of this finance committee on the amount of Turner's shortage. We chose this committee from our own members. No one of them is, or has been, a general officer. We believe their report unless Mr. Turner has evidence not yet forthcoming. We do not believe one word he says about our other officers, for the reason that he has said it all before, and it has all been before denied and refuted."

Creditors Who Are Dissatisfied at a Settlement Made.

Three very interesting and important suits were filed in common pleas court Saturday afternoon.

In 1884 C. Messenger was transacting a tobacco business in Toledo, and on the 14th day of May of that year made an assignment, and settled at 25 cents on the dollar. The suits mentioned were filed by these creditors. They are Walker & Sengstak, R. Mier & Co., wholesale leaf tobacco dealers of Cincinnati, and the Second National bank of Toledo.

The petitioners allege that when the goods and money were delivered and settlement made with C. Messenger it was supposed that "C. Messenger" constituted the firm, and that the firm was wholly insolvent. They now claim that Calvin Bronson was a silent partner in the business, and that the two, Calvin Bronson and C. Messenger, conspired together to cheat and defraud the plaintiffs out of what was due them on valid claims.

According to the petition Walker & Sengstak settled by accepting a note of $409.51 indorsed by Calvin Bronson, which was paid when due. They sue for $1,602.04, the balance of the claim.

R. Mier & Co. settled for $2,535.48 and now claim a balance of $8,476.96.

The Second National bank settled at $2,500 and now claim $8,364.91.

THE KNIGHTS OF LABOR

Closing Up the Work of the General Assembly.

Reports of Committees Being Acted Upon—Adjournment Likely to Take Place To-Night.

The most important action of the Knights' convention on Saturday afternoon was the adoption of the report of the committee on secret work, whereby new members are instructed. While this is not a matter for publication, is is understood and may be stated that the ritual has been shortened and simplified. It is felt that evening sessions of men and women who work hard all day should not be prolonged, and that routine work should be as brief as possible, in order that time for the discussion of labor questions may be allowed and meetings not be over two hours long. Hence the changes in the ritual, which are very satisfactory to all representatives.

Saturday evening the "school of 49" was continued for the instruction of the knights of Toledo and the visitors. Yesterday afternoon and last evening open meetings were held in Walbridge hall for general talks upon the industrial question. At the afternoon meeting the hall was filled to its seating capacity, and interesting speeches were made by Representatives Chamberlain, of Nebraska; Litchman, of Massachusetts; Watchman, of Pennsylvania; Martin, of Minneapolis; George, of New York, and Gould, of Indianapolis. These speakers were limited to 15 minutes each, but Representative James Wright, of the garment-workers of North America, No. F. A. 231, spoke without limit, by request, as he was to present the trouble between this organization and the Rochester firms, and many trades unionists were, upon invitation, present to hear this trouble reviewed. This trouble has been fully reviewed in the Bee, and Mr. Wright's statements confirm what has been here said.

At the evening session representative Gilruth of Kansas City spoke upon the alliance movement and offered the peoples' party vote as the panacea for all industrial evils. Other speakers were Representatives Gruner of New York, Anna Stute of Denver, Cavanaugh of Cincinnati.

Many of the delegates attended the Church of Our Father in the morning to hear Mr. Jennings speak upon "Labor and the Labor Movement," and Dr. McGaw's church in the evening to hear him talk upon "Labor and the Labor Movement."

So far as the present finances of the Order are concerned, the following is the report of the committee on finance:

To the Officers and Members of the General Assembly of the Knights of Labor, Greeting:

1. Your committee on finance beg leave to report that we have made a thorough examination of the books of the general secretary-treasurer, and find them accurate in every particular.

2. Meeting for the purposes of our appointment, in advance of the time designated by law for the opening of the general assembly, we had ample time to pursue our examination, and conducted our work free from the embarrassments which would have beset us had we been engaged in attending the sessions of the general assembly or in the discharge of other duties.

3. Commencnig with the amount of cash balance on hand at the last report of the general secretary-treasurer to the general assembly, at its Denver session, your committee gave a careful scrutiny to all the financial acts of the past year, ending on June 30, 1891, and confirm the report of the general secretary-treasurer, as now submitted.

The original tally sheets, containing in detail the receipts for the year; the receipts and vouchers for the payments made, and the books of accounts, ledgers, cash books and journals, were all submitted to your committee, who availed themselves of every source from which the fullest information could be obtained, and we cannot too highly commend the explicit yet simple system upon which the accounts are kept.

Respectfully submitted,
H. BREITENSTEIN,
JOS. R. MANSION,
P. HENRY QUINN.

The report of the committee was received, taken up clause by clause and adopted. Minor matters reported from this committee have also been acted upon.

Important resolutions, adopted almost unanimously, are the following:

That this general assembly recommends that, as a rule, assemblies throughout the order refrain from electing or maintaining in office any member who seeks or holds a political position.

That the world's W. C. T. U. petition, concerning traffic in opium and liquor, does not properly come before this body for action.

That we favor the opening of the Columbian exposition, for all purposes except buying and selling, upon Sunday, in the interests of the working men and women of Chicago who have no other day for seeing it, and

That we further ask that no workmen or workwomen be employed in and about the grounds more than 48 hours each week.

The probable place for the next meeting is now a topic of general discussion. Albany, N. Y., Baltimore, Milwaukee, Hot Springs, Ark., and St. Louis are named. The Arkansas delegates will pledge the order part of the funds necessary to defray expenses if that pince is selected. This, and all other questions must soon be decided, as these are the closing hours of the session.

On opening this afternoon a motion to remain in session until the business of the convention is completed was taken without debate and failed to carry.

This means at least an evening or all night session, and the adjournment may not be until some time to-morrow.

The roster of a circus traveling through South America has twenty-four performers, eleven musicians, six bill posters, eleven canvasmen, five chandelier men, four property men and three hostlers. They have twenty-two horses and ponies, and a troupe of performing stallions, dogs and monkeys. Among the performers are more skirt dancers and fancy dancers than tumblers, leapers and bareback riders together, indicating the decided change in the attractions offered as compared with an old-time circus.

It is said that a new sea is to appear on the maps henceforth, or rather a new name for a part of the old sea. The Australian Association for the Advancement of Science, while considering the geographical formation of that portion of the ocean lying west of Australia and Tasmania, and bounded on the other sides by New Zealand and the western islands of the Polynesian groups, proposed to name it the Tasman sea, and the English admiralty has accepted the suggestion and ordered that the name appear on the admiralty charts.

The council committee on ways and means will meet this evening, and besides other business will consider bids for two lots of improvement bonds, the same being for Superior street, from Orange to Cherry, $5,650, and Superior street, from Buffalo to Galena, $12,499.58.

BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The board of aldermen meet this evening, and from the looks of the schedule of business to be transacted the session will probably be a long one. The ordinance fixing the price of illuminating gas will come up on second reading; the general street railway ordinance is on deck again, and there are a large number of ordinances and resolutions for various matters.

HIT WITH A BOTTLE.

A row occurred in Gradolph's saloon on Summit street early Sunday morning, and as a result John Mack was hit in the eye with a bottle, a lamp was broken and a man named W. G. Greer was locked up in the police station with charges against him for disturbance, malicious destruction of property and assault and battery. In police court this morning the charge of disturbance was marked off docket and Greer was fined $7 and costs for assault and battery and $5 and costs for malicious destruction of property.

THANKS TO CHIEF WALL.

Bills & Koch, who suffered loss by Friday night's fire have sent the following note of acknowledgment to Mr. Chris. Wall, chief of the department, with a box of cigars:

To Chief Wall:

Bills & Koch.

FOR STRIKING A WOMAN.

A railroad man named John Ormon was arraigned in police court this morning on a charge of assault and battery, for having struck Mrs. Carrie Decker, Saturday afternoon, while in the plaintiff's saloon on Lafayette street. The evidence showed that he struck her twice in the breast with his fists and threatened to clean out the place. Ormon claimed that he did not strike the woman, but on the other hand she called him and others vile names and threatened several men with a piece of iron pipe. His story didn't go, however, and he was fined $10 and costs.

MR. VAN AARLE IS DEAD.

It has been generally known that Mr. Thomas Van Aarle has been very low for some time, and his death on Saturday afternoon was not entirely unexpected. Mr. Van Aarle has been a resident of Toledo for nearly 25 years, and has always borne an honorable reputation. He was born October 27, 1826, at Osch province, North Brabant, Holland, and came to Toledo in 1868, where he has since lived. He was married in 1851, and leaves a widow and one son. Mr. Van Aarle was engaged in the merchant tailoring business at the same place, 206 South St. Clair street, since 1881. He served in the city council for four years, and was also interested in every movement for the city's welfare.

The funeral will be held from St. Peter's church, St. Clair street, to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock.

SOMEWHAT OF A COINCIDENCE.

For some reason or other yesterday morning, the sexton and natural gas failed to connect, and as a consequence, the worshipers at St. John's M. E. church were compelled to leave the audience room and occupy the school room. The pastor, Rev. Dr. Fish, in his reference to the matter, related a train of coincidences which is remarkable, to say the least. In his pastorate at Findlay, on the third Sunday in November in the first year, a freeze-out occurred, and on taking up the work at Lima the experience was repeated in regular order—third Sunday in November, first year. It so happened that yesterday was the third Sunday in November, and it is also Mr. Fish's first year. There were some in the congregation who were ready to believe, after the explanation, that blame for the freeze-out yesterday was not to be laid to any one in particular, since it likely had to be so to keep up a chain of events.
